BOY COMPACTED

DELTA (CP) — A 12-year-old Surrey boy nearly got packed away with the garbage Wednesday after he ran away from home.

Delta police said the boy ran away from home Tuesday because of trouble at school. He found a bed for the night in a large garbage bin at the shopping mall.

The next morning, unaware the boy was inside, the diver of a Haul-Away Disposal Ltd. truck hooked on to the bin and dumped it aboard his truck.

The boy and garbage were then run through a complete cycle of the compacting machinery. It wasn't until the driver started to drive away that he heard screaming from the back of the truck.

The boy was pulled out unhurt and turned over to his mother at home. The only loss was one shoe in the compactor.

POLITICAL AMNESTY URGED

Black Demands Delay Geneva Talks Start

Times News Services

GENEVA — Black nationalists forced a two hour delay in the opening of the Rhodesia conference today with demands for concessions from white Prime Minister Ian Smith.

The demands which caused the postponement came from nationalist leaders Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo, conference officials revealed.

They said the two men insisted on receiving a reply from Smith to earlier demands for the release of all political detainees in Rhodesia.

Smith had sent a reply to Richard Wednesday night but it apparently had not been relayed to the Africans, the officials said.

Smith, in his response indicated he would consider the release of some prisoners but that all acts of terrorism would first have to cease.

Earlier Richard told newsmen the major problem facing the parley was the "enormous depth of suspicion between the two sides. One sees it, one can almost feel it in the air around this building and this town."

Richard also said that the talks on establishing black majority rule could go on for five or six weeks.

"You are asking me questions that are five or six weeks down the road if this conference is going to be successful," he told reporters.

Meanwhile, in Salisbury, security officials announced that 11 persons have died in clashes, abduction and sexual violence in the last three days of escalating warfare.

Security forces headquarters Wednesday said its forces killed two black guerrillas in clashes and a black man who apparently violated a government curfew.

It said guerrillas killed seven persons — all apparently blacks — including a government official and a policeman shot to death after being forced at gunpoint to have sexual relations with two young women.

The eleventh casualty, they said, was a black man who hanged himself in jail "after confessing to have aided terrorists."

Black nationalists have vowed to further intensify the violence, particularly if the Geneva conference falters.

HANGING HOUSE BUILT IN BRIDGE

HOUSTON (CP)—Officials are baffled as to how a makeshift house, complete with a toilet and lighting system, came to be built 45 feet above the swirling Bulkley River amid the supporting framework of a highway bridge just outside this northwest B.C. community.

John Turford of Burns Lake, "a highways department foreman, said in an interview that the wood frame structure was well constructed with insulated walls.

"I wouldn't call it a house, but it was a very liveable thing."

He said the RCMP told him Wednesday the structure was the work of several juveniles, but police remain stumped as to how it was built and how those responsible for it gained access. "If this was kids, then, as far as I'm concerned, they got an awful lot of courage," Mr. Turford said.

He said when highways crews first spotted the structure about a week ago, they tried to gain access to it by going over the bridge railing and swinging into it with the help of safety lines, but "it was too damn risky."

Access was finally gained by using a 50-foot fire-truck ladder.

Cruise Ship For City?

The Nanaimo company that bought the cruise ship Prince George from the provincial government earlier this year is now investigating whether or not she can be used as a hotel-motel-restaurant in Victoria's Inner Harbor.

A spokesman for Wong Bros. Enterprises confirmed today his company is interested in bringing the 350-foot ship to Victoria but declined to elaborate.

The company's original intention was to use the Prince George as a restaurant and convention centre in the Nanaimo Harbor but a suitable site is apparently not available.

Victoria deputy fire chief Carl Coates said he has been approached by a Yarrows shipyard official who wanted to know what conversion requirements would be needed to make the Prince George meet fire marshal requirements for a hotel-motel-restaurant facility.

Victoria Mayor Mike Young said the Reid Centre frontage is now under the authority of the provincial government and administered through the Capital Improvement District Commission. Any decision on granting docking facilities would have to be made by the provincial government, in co-operation with the city.

He doubted, however, if sufficient wharfage would be available.

Guards Favor Strike

MONTREAL (CP) — The 7,000 employees of the Canadian Penitentiary Service have given their union, the Public Service Alliance of Canada, a strike mandate to back 12 demands made earlier this month.

The employees, who include guards, clerks and secretaries, voted 77 per cent in favor of the strike mandate to back the demands made Oct. 3 at a meeting between the 47 regional union presidents and penitentiary commissioner Andre Therrien.

The vote was taken in secret last week and Mr. Therrien has notified the union he will make a decision this week on the demands which include:

—That all prisoners considered to be troublemakers be placed in special institutions away from the rest of the prison population.

—That a full delegation of authority be given to institutional directors and that they be responsible to the commissioner.

—That guards not be forced to work overtime.

—That prisoners wear identification numbers on the front and back of their uniforms to make it easy for guards to identify those involved in disturbances.

—That no prisoner be permitted to make any statements to the media unless approved by prison officials.

THREINEN

DORCHESTER, N.B. (CP) — Officials at the maximum-security penitentiary resumed negotiations today with four prisoners holding two hostages. Talks had broken off for the night several hours earlier.

Tom Epp, assistant penitentiary director, said that prisoner John Threinen, convicted in October, 1975, of killing four children in Saskatoon, is one of the hostages.

The other is prison guard John Gabriel, 25, who was taking the prisoners to a recreation area Wednesday afternoon when he was abducted by three prisoners wielding a kitchen utensil, thought to be a knife.

The two hostages are reported to be shackled but in good condition.

Epp said there have been the "standard threats" against them, such as removal of fingers, if authorites do not co-operate.

Officials refused a demand for keys to five other cells in the segregation block, but agreed to demands for better recreation facilities, an investigation into medical facilities, an inquiry into the concept of segregating prisoners from other criminals, and the transfer of participants in the hostage-taking to other institutions.

Officials also rejected a demand that the participants not be segregated when they are transferred, Epp said.

John Steeves, a CBC reporter from Moncton who was requested by the prisoners to join the negotiations, said today the prisoners do not trust officials and want ironclad guarantees their demands will be met.

The prisoners also asked for the tranquillizer Seconal but prison officials gave them Valium.

The 101-year-old prison near the New Brunswick-Nova Scotia border has a section where sex offenders such as Threinen and other unpopular prisoners are kept for their own protection.

Hydro Sees Less Demand

VANCOUVER (AP) — Hugh Goldie, a planner for B.C. Hydro, says growth of electricity demands in the province during the next 10 years won't be as high as previously predicted.

Goldie, Hydro's system engineering division manager, said Wednesday in an interview that because of this decline and because necessary studies cannot be completed in time, the Peace River Site dam project and the McGregor River diversion probably can be delayed.

He also said that whether Hydro's plans include thermal or hydro-produced power, inflation has increased the cost by 20 to 25 per cent above May, 1975, estimates.

Goldie said he wanted to make it clear that he was discussing power developments that may follow Hydro's currently proposed Revelstoke Dam on the Columbia River.

He made the statements while discussing the extensive review Hydro has prepared for consideration by its directors. Details of the review have not been made public and no decision on the report has been made.

BEIRUT (UPI) — President Elias Sarkis worked today to consolidate the eight-day-old cease-fire in Lebanon amid signs of increasing Syrian-Palestinian co-operation in the south near the border with Israel.

Police Almost Walked Off

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Late pay cheques and a one-day pay deduction for 21 Victoria policemen who booked off sick last Thursday in a stalled-contract protest sparked threats of another walkout this morning.

But later police union president Sgt. Patrick Braiden said at least the first problem had been resolved.

"The cheques arrived by 10 a.m., otherwise we wouldn't still be here," he said.

Braiden said the problem arose because Mayor Mike Young, chairman of the Victoria police board, appeared to have "reconsidered his position" since an agreement reached last Friday.

The result was the decision —he didn't know whether it was Young's or the police board's — to dock a day's pay for the officers concerned, and this in turn caused delays in the preparation of the cheques.

But the mayor himself expressed surprise at the union's attitude, saying Braiden was informed by letter early in the week that the deductions would be made.

Young said he stated in the letter that the officers who were "quote, sick, unquote" would not be paid for that day. This was not a matter of disciplinary action or retaliation, however.

He also pointed out to the union that if it disagrees, the appropriate action would be to file a grievance.

STOVE BLASTS BOAT

VANCOUVER (CP) — A stove burning in the cabin apparently touched off an explosion and fire Wednesday which destroyed a 35-foot fishboat in Coal Harbor.

Owner of the boat, an unidentified Powell River man, was not injured.

Ron Robison, attendant at the gas barge where the accident began, said he had just pumped 80 gallons of gasoline into the boat and was starting to pump in stove oil when the explosion occurred.

He said the owner scrambled off the bow of the boat when the cabin exploded and the two men threw off the mooring lines and the boat drifted away from the barge.

"Then he informed me his stove was going through all this (refuelling)," said Robison.

He added that the owner mentioned it was his second boat which had exploded.

The boat ran aground at Stanley Park where land-based fire crews waded into the water and doused the flames. The city fire boat was unable to operate because the water was too shallow.

PREVUE PUZZLE PAYOFF DOUBLES

To the more than 2,400 Victoria daily newspaper readers who entered the Prevue Payoff Puzzle contest last week:

That's right. There was no correct solution to the puzzle received by the judges and this week's Payoff Puzzle prize goes up to $100.

The Prevue section in Friday's Times will give puzzle fans the correct solution to last week's puzzle, along with the reasons for choosing one word over another in filling in the crossword blanks — and another chance at the prize money with a new puzzle and official entry blank.

A word of caution to all entrants: please read the rules carefully so that your entry will qualify. Most important, if you do not follow the instructions to write the answer to one of the clues, as designated in the entry form, on the outside of your envelope, your entry will not be considered. And no entries received after the specified deadline will be considered.

If you study the answers to last week's puzzle carefully, you'll find that winning this prize is not a matter of luck. Finding the correct solution to the clues where more than one answer seems to apply requires careful definition of the word and its most logical use.

That's why the Prevue Payoff Puzzle would be fun for crossword fans even if there wasn't a cash prize to be won.

Pound Nosedives as Labor Squabbles

Times News Services

Britain's pound fell to a new low today while leaders of the ruling Labor party squabbled publicly over economic policy.

The pound slid to a low of $1.5610 U.S. (In Montreal, the pound was selling today at $1.5198 Canadian.)

Sterling had opened at $1.5710 U.S. compared with Wednesday's closing $1.5760. It dropped to $1.5690, then recovered briefly before falling to the new low.

Harassed foreign exchange dealers said the new drop was sparked by a 13-6 vote of the left-wing dominated national executive committee of the Labor party demanding the government restore planned spending cuts and apply "socialist policies and not cut back on the social wage."

Prime Minister James Callaghan stormed out of the meeting when it rejected the government's economic policies to date. The committee's decisions are not binding on government ministers.

"We are going to lose anyway, so it doesn't matter about my leaving," witnesses quoted Callahan as saying.

The committee also pledged support for a Nov. 17 meeting planned by 10 trade unions to protest to members of Parliament a government decision to slash public spending by $1.6 billion next year in the fight against inflation.

"The market remained extremely nervous this morning, reflecting worries about the government's ability to stave off threats to declared policies by left-wingers," a dealer for Barclays Bank International said.

Some dealers said they believed the Bank of England had intervened in the market to support sterling.

The dollar also weakened on most European markets today and fears arose in Paris that the pound's record low could drag down the French franc.

Sterling's effective devaluation against the currencies of Britain's 10 major trading partners since December, 1971, widened to 48.6 per cent.

SECOND SLIDE CUTS POWER

PRINCE RUPERT — A large mudslide, the second in two days in this area, left residents of nearby Port Edward without power today. The slide cut hydro lines, the road and CN Rail's main line between Prince Rupert and Terrace.

Power was restored to Prince Rupert Wednesday night after the city was blacked out by a mudslide Tuesday.

Triangle Ends in Death

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — Police say an estranged husband armed with a .30-.30 calibre rifle killed his wife Wednesday and then killed her lover before turning the rifle on himself.

Dead are William Thomson, 30, Sharon Armstrong, 30 and her estranged husband Ronald Armstrong, 31, all of Brampton.

Police say that Armstrong drove to the house where his wife was living with Thomson, entered the house and shot her twice in the face.

He shot Thomson once but the wounded man managed to get out of the house and make his way to his neighbor's front verandah where he was shot a second time.

Armstrong then returned into the house and shot himself, police say. His body was found along with his wife's in the ground-floor living room.

Mrs. Armstrong, who had been separated from her husband for three months, had moved in with Thomson on Friday.

Staff Inspector Des Rowland of the Peel Regional Police who is heading the investigation, said the high-powered rifle used in the killings had just been purchased.

Secret Account Held by Nixon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Bahamian bank records viewed by an undercover IRS informant indicate Richard Nixon had a secret bank account there while he was president, the Los Angeles Times reported today.

Informant Norman Casper, a Florida investigator, told Congress about the alleged records last year according to the paper.

Nixon has repeatedly denied having any foreign bank accounts while he was president.

Clubs Blast Kahl Junket

Esquimalt MLA Lyle Kahl's media tour of the Western communities may have been more costly than the Socred backbencher first thought.

Three of the four service clubs named as sponsors of the Cadillac limousine and helicopter junket into the Langford-Colwood area were never approached by Kahl or his organizers.

And one service club — the South Van Isle Lions Club — is "bloody mad" at him after learning its name had been used as a sponsor of the event.

Kahl was the host of an Oct. 13 tour designed to familiarize members of the Victoria media with the western sector of the Capital region.

The media awareness trip is estimated to have cost at least $2,000.

In a letter to the Victoria Times, Lions member Eric Faure wrote: "Mr. Kahl, in naming the Lions Club as a co-sponsor together with the Social Credit Party without the consent or even knowledge of our club, is using a rather unethical method of drawing attention to himself, and by this action has done nothing to enhance his reputation both with those who support his particular political philosophy and those who have opposing views."

Lions president William Hilton agreed "We're bloody mad at him." He said the motto of the Lions is "we serve." And that means we will serve the community in any way possible, except if it's politically oriented.

He said Kahl's move was "the same rip-off the premier (Bill Bennett) did on TV on Thanksgiving Day." Kahl got all that publicity in "a rather cheap way," he said.

The Lions say their international constitution specifically forbids participation in political activities.

Kahl expressed surprise when asked by the Times why three of the service clubs had not only not sponsored the event, but had not even been contacted.

The MLA said he asked one of the organizers the names of the sponsors, and when he was given the list, tacked all their names to the bottom of the letter of invitation to the press.

Kahl said he will apologize to the service clubs and is willing to go to their meetings to explain the communications break-down.

"I feel bad about the way it happened, but good about the fact that everyone was pleased with the press tour," he said.

"If someone had picked up the phone and called me, it would have been a simple matter for me to say 'I'm sorry, it was a communications thing.'"

Of the four "sponsoring" Kinsmen, Lions and Rotary — only the Rotary was approached by the organizers with a request for a financial contribution.

The club agreed it was a good idea, and gave $50.

Peltier Loses Appeal

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — The federal court of appeal Wednesday upheld a B.C. Supreme Court decision to extradict American Indian fugitive Leonard Peltier to the United States.

After reading written submissions and hearing three days of oral arguments Justices William Ryan, Hug Gibson and R. J. Kerr concluded there was not sufficient reason to overrule the decision of Mr. Justice W. A. Schultz.

Mr. Justice Schultz ruled June 18 that the U.S. has a prima facie case against Peltier who faces charges of murder, attempted murder and burglary in South Dakota.

P. W. Halprin, federal justice department lawyer and counsel for the U.S., said the decision will be given today to justice minister Ron Basford, who will make the final decision on Peltier's extradition.

Defence lawyer Sturat Rush said Peltier's 16-month fight to resist extradition is far from over.

He said he and lawyer Don Rosenbloom will make an immediate submission to Basford unless they decide to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada.

The defence has maintained that Peltier is a political prisoner because the motives for the U.S. returning him are political.

They feel he is being singled out for American Indian Movement activities on the Pine Ridge reserve and particularly for the July, 1975, deaths of two FBI agents there.

Peltier's three co-accused have been cleared of murder charges arising from the incident.

City Mayor Opposes Saanich Shopping Plan

And the politicians didn't particularly like what they saw.

The planners outlined a proposal which would see major commercial and office centres developed in Langford, on Jacklin Road, and in Saanich, on Vernon.

Although committee members weren't upset over the general concept, they were disturbed by the location of the Saanich centre.

Victoria Mayor Mike Young, chairman of the committee, wondered what the impact would be on transportation facilities and mused aloud the effect such a centre would have on downtown trade.

He said he could see the logic in promoting a regional centre on Jacklin Road.

"If you can do it, that's fine," he said.

However he said he feels a major centre on Vernon will only result in "spreading the downtown core over a wider area."

"We've been going in the opposite direction. We've been trying to infill and make our downtown more compact," the mayor said. "I don't think we've screwed up yet. We think it's the right course to make the downtown stronger."

Regional planner Peter Hammer said a dispersal of services, particularly retail commercial services, is needed.

"Another major department store is required," he said. "I feel it should be in Saanich. But the key is where do you put it in Saanich?"

Hammer said the initial plan was to locate about 250,000 square feet of the space in a regional centre in Saanich. (A large department store, he noted, has an area of about 100,000 square feet.)

GARDOM HOPEFUL IN SEABED ROW

Attorney-General Garde Gardom said today he hopes he can settle the disputed ownership of the seabed under Georgia Strait without going to the Supreme Court of Canada.

The B.C. Court of Appeals ruled earlier this year that the province does own the seabed but the federal government announced earlier this week that it would appeal this decision.

Gardom said he talked to federal Justice Minister Ron Basford Wednesday and was told the minister is still willing to talk about the case.

"The fact the minister merely filed the appeal within the set length of time does not preclude continuing negotiations and consultations," the attorney-general said.

"I'm hopeful we can still have a resolution without involving the court," he said.

No date has been set for the meeting with the justice minister.

Gardom said if the proposed talks fail B.C. will "strongly assert" its case before the Supreme Court.

Lockheed Scandal In Spain

MADRID (WP) — Spain suspended two air force officers Wednesday in its investigation of allegations of Lockheed payoffs that could total $1.35 million. There were reports that as many as 17 persons are implicated.

The political ramifications of the scandal reach all the way to King Juan Carlos I, who sent a special emissary to Washington last winter when news broke that the American Aircraft Corporation had paid a large bribe to high-ranking officials.

The King, according to official sources, wanted a lid on the scandal until the transition from Generalissimo Francisco Franco's dictatorship was well under way.

The air ministry announced that air force Brig. Gen. Luis Rey Rodriguez, 61, and Col. Carlos Grandal Segade, also 61, were relieved of their duties Tuesday night until Spain's Lockheed probe is completed.

The suspensions brought into the open Spain's investigation into the Lockheed payoff scandal that already has rocked governments in the Netherlands, Japan and Italy.

The special prosecutor is expected to call between eight and 17 persons for questioning in the next few weeks, CIFRA, the official Spanish news agency, reported Wednesday. Two aggressive news weeklies, Cambio 16 and Opinion, had mentioned similar figures earlier.

King Juan Carlos was quickly drawn into the latest step in the Spanish scandal when the information ministry attempted to ban Cambio 16 for publishing details of the scandal and the names of officers and civilians allegedly involved, publishing sources said.

the weather

A weakening frontal system stretching from the Pacific across the lower mainland is drifting slowly southwards and will be south of the province by tonight. As this system moved southeastwards Wednesday it brought heavy rain and gale force winds to the mainland's north coast and west coast of Vancouver Island. Rain and strong winds occurred in all areas of the province as the system passed through. A strong onshore flow from the Pacific of moist, unstable air will keep the outer coast shrouded with clouds bearing more rain. The prospect for southern and central B.C. is better with the hope of some sunshine for Friday.

Shot Friend in Battle of Rifles—Rodriquez

NANAIMO (CP) — James Rodriguez Melendez testified in B.C. Supreme Court Wednesday that he shot his former friend in a battle of rifles and then shot the axe-swinging woman who caused the rift in their friendship.

Rodriguez, 25, is charged with murder in the shooting deaths of James Oldfield and Pamela Jones in a house near Duncan, Oct. 24, 1975.

He said the shootings occurred when he went to the house to retrieve personal effects including $2,000 worth of camera equipment and $3,500 in cash. He said he was moving out because he feared Oldfield and that he went to the house when he believed no one was there.

Rodriguez testified he feared Oldfield because tales of gangland-style killings told him both by friends who subsequently became Crown witnesses and by Oldfield.

Because he was afraid, he took a .22-calibre rifle when he went to the house on Oct. 24, 1975.

As he piled belongings in the kitchen, "I heard the front door opening, I called out, I heard feet running and a door close."

"I thought I was in some kind of danger ... of the threats he (Oldfield) had made and he was going to do me some harm," Rodriguez testified.

Rifle in hand, he went down a hallway, opend a door and saw Oldfield.

"I saw Oldfield with the rifle working the mechanism to load it," Rodriguez said.

He said Oldfield raised the rifle, put his hand to the trigger area and "I used my gun and I shot; I felt fear for my life."

"He said he could not say Oldfield shot, but that he heard a bang from that direction.

"He fell down . . . the young lady (Jones) started screaming. I backed out of the bedroom and I saw (her) coming at me. She had picked up one of the wood axes and came forward screaming. I remember she swung twice.

"I backed up into the kitchen, screaming (at her) 'No, no don't do this,'" Rodriguez said.

"I backed up until I collided with the stove and the furnishings in the kitchen."

Asked why he didn't run, he said he was certain she would hit him with the axe as he turned his back. The gun went off at least once he said, but she continued swinging at him.

"Then I pointed my gun at her and I shot."

Rodriguez said the woman fell and the house became silent.

"I was sort of crying," he said, adding that he went to Oldfield "to see if he was alive, and he wasn't."

He said he then drank a full bottle of wine he found in the house, then called his friend Gerald Frank, a Crown witness.

Frank and Wolfgang Brust, another Crown witness, arrived in about an hour, he said. He told court the two talked him out of calling the police, because no one would believe his story.

In shock, he obeyed their suggestions, Rodriguez said. The three men then wrapped the bodies and tied them with string, carried them to a rented car Rodriguez had been using and took them to a nearby dump.

When Frank suggested that lye be used to destroy the bodies, Rodriguez said he became horrified and started screaming at them. He said the bodies were thrown near the dump and that Brust covered them with blood-stained carpeting taken from the house.

The trial continues.

Joe Bourque's Cheap Shot

Nominations for area municipal elections are barely in and Saanich Alderman Joe Bourque is darkly warning that organized labor and party politicians may be trying to take over local councils. Similar crocodile tears were shed by Victoria Alderman Bob Wright when that municipality voted for biennial election of the entire city council. At the time, Wright said it would be worth the effort of big money and labor to try to influence the election from backrooms if the biennial proposal was passed — a proposal, it should be added, that was initiated by Wright.

But enough of the pushmi-pullyu logic of Victoria's confused council. Let's go back to Bourque. Most of his worries over dark plots to take over area councils are predicted on his own interpretation of events. To date the only candidate directly tied to organized labor is Victoria Labor Council Secretary Larry Ryan. That Ryan is going to run partially because of a Union of British Columbia Municipalities' right to work resolution is only natural. In a democratic society if a person doesn't like the direction his government is taking he votes against it, or better still, tries to get elected and change things.

It would seem the only other fact Bourque has for his hysterical warnings is the candidature of John Mika for Saanich council. Mika was a former executive assistant in the NDP provincial government, true. But he was also a political reporter for the Victoria Times and a national press gallery reporter in Ottawa for FP publications. If anything, his past employment should be an asset, not a liability in seeking political office. To summon up all this unjust verbiage over the candidature of two men is a cheap shot from an alderman we have come to expect more of during his tenure on Saanich council.

It is ironic too, that Bourque and Wright, successful businessmen both, would worry about a few candidates in municipal elections who do not represent the usual business interests. According to details filed under the Public Officials and Employees Disclosure Act, Bourque lists Midland Doherty Ltd., and investment dealer, and AGF Management Ltd. (investment management) as financially remunerating businesses. Wright has a large investment in operating a whale show concession. Who do these two men represent, if not the business community in which they earn their living? It is seamy politics to hint that Ryan and Mika would be any less responsible in representing their constituencies than Wright and Bourque are in representing the wishes of all the people in theirs.

For too many years area municipal councils have been run almost entirely by local merchants and lawyers. It is a healthy sign that more candidates from different fields are taking up political cudgels. What is Bourque afraid of? A healthy difference of opinion and democratic debate in the heretofore cosy homogenized area councils? Perhaps a little less secrecy in Saanich council meetings might be effected by the election of new blood. Now that Alf Hood has indicated he will retire from Victoria council, it is otherwise made up entirely of aldermen with close connections to the business community. If one member from organized labor is going to upset this comfortable fraternity then councils are frightened of shadows. During the 1960s another secretary of the Victoria Labor Council, Alf Toone, was elected mayor of Victoria and did a good job in a growing city.

Why is it considered "good experience" for young lawyers to be employed by the federal Liberal or Conservative parties while anybody who has had connections with organized labor or the NDP is tainted? Another example: Gerry Kristianson, a former executive assistant to ex-provincial Liberal leader David Anderson, is chairman of the Saanich school board. Nobody points the finger at him because of his prior employment. Joe Bourque and the rest of municipal pals should stick to the issues in the upcoming election and forget peoples' vocations. These kinds of scare tactics have no place here, and should be disregarded by area voters when they make their choices in November.

JAMES GRAY

The Bilingual Paper Chase

CALGARY — If bilingualism has become the most divisive force in recent Canadian history, as avowed by the prime minister, and confirmed by the resignation of James Richardson and the Ottawa byelection, what went wrong with a seemingly noble gesture to right some ancient wrongs? How did we get into this mess? And, more important, how do we get out of it?

The complexity of the problem is illustrated by this fact: Before any of these questions can be considered it is essential to emphasize that the bilingual problem in the west bears no resemblance to the bilingual problem in Ottawa and the eastern civil service.

Within the government service bilingualism comes down to jobs, opportunities for promotion and wages. With such bread and butter issues continually in the forefront it has come to resemble an omnipresent malignancy. West of the Lakehead none of these things is involved so public outrage over the bilingual program is very much a sometimes thing. It tends to erupt only under such provocative circumstances as those surrounding the air controllers strike.

In the four western provinces bilingual controversy focuses mainly on the massive and manic wastage of taxpayers' money by the Liberal government. And not only taxpayers' money. Bilingual labeling carried to extreme has added as much, in the western view, to the cost of livning as government printing has added to the tax load.

Paper Blizzard

The French language is an irrelevancy in the four western provinces because the language question was settled, once and for all, by provincial government action away back in 1916. As a result, English has been the sole language of intercourse in education, government, commerce, industry, finance, politics, the professions and trades unions. The only exceptions are in the miniscule and scattered Ukrainian, Chinese, German, Polish, French, Pakistani and Indian enclaves.

What is not irrelevant is the way westerners are snowed under with, for them, useless French translations of government printing.

Ottawa's journey to political hell was, of course, over a road paved from curb to curb with good intentions. For several generations discrimination against French Canadians in the government service and crown corporations was a public scandal. The federal bilingual program was designed to end this discrimination and make it possible in that famous Trudeau catch-phrase, "for French Canadians to feel at home in their own country."

If the Liberal policy had been confined to the areas in which the real problem existed no hackles would have been raised in the west. None. It was the paper blizzard that did the program dirt. That, and the endless rhetoric of the bilingual zealots about this being a country of "two founding peoples", "two founding races", "two founding cultures", "two founding languages."

For the people of western Canada this is empty, even insulating rhetoric for this then empty wilderness was founded by influxing settlers from the United States, the United Kingdom, Orange-Protestant Ontario and Eastern Europe, in descending order of numerical importance.

Under the Sifton immigration policy, large numbers of European settlers were placed in linguistic blocs in the prairie provinces. In these blocs they set up their own schools in their own languages. As a result from 1900 until 1915 thousands of immigrant children were being unilingually educated in German, Ukrainian, Icelandic, Hungarian and Polish languages, as well as in French.

This development was interpreted by the provincial governments of the day as threatening a language balkanization of the west which would prevent a unified nation from evolving. The region would become a babel of non-communicating nationalities. In 1916 Manitoba and

JAMES RICHARDSON
... focus of dissent

Saskatchewan passed laws prohibiting the use of any language of instruction but English in the provincial schools. It was a shattering blow to the Germans and Ukrainians in particular. More than 5,000 Germans migrated to Mexico and South America rather than accept the new law.

The Ukrainians were just as unhappy but they stayed and conformed. For 1,000 years, the Ukrainians like the Poles and Czechs and Slovaks had been captive people of imperial powers. The Russians tried to stamp out the Ukrainian language by severely restricting its use. In Canada the Ukrainians expected to have the free use of their language, an expectation not discouraged in any way by the immigration agents. The 1916 legislation was a bitter blow and the Ukrainians tried to counteract it by strengthening their cultural heritage and language use within the western Canadian context.

By 1921 the Anglicizing of the west was complete. The census that year listed 1,843,000 western Canadians over five years of age of whom 1,737,000 spoke English, 1,187,000 spoke only English and 9,000 spoke only French. By 1971 the west contained 5,329,000 English speakers and just under 10,000 who spoke only French.

The language problems of the west were clearly wiped away after the region opted for unilingual English schools in 1916. So when Ottawa launched its French language crusade it would have blown clear over western Canada if it had not been for two things: 1. the Ukrainians; 2. the bilingual paper blizzard.

The extension of the French language crusade into western Canada hit the Ukrainians where they hurt, in the language department. Not only had they been deprived of the use of their own language, they were now to have a totally alien tongue, French, thrust upon them and their children. As a counter to the bilingual campaign they spearheaded the drive for recognition of multiculturalism as the key to developing a Canadian mosaic. Today, as a rough guess on the prairies the adherents to mulcitulturalism probably outnumbered the bilingualists by 10 to one.

Sheer Stupidity

If Ottawa had gone out deliberately to turn everyone in the unilingual west against its bilingual program it could hardly have done things differently. Of all its mistakes none exceeds the sheer stupidity of its bilingual paper chase. Every time a western taxpayer gets any sort of government communication, it screams at him that his money is being wasted on bilingual printing. Every supermarket shelf in the land is loaded exclusively with government ordered conspicuously wasteful labeling of consumers' goods.

So what's to be done? Where do we go from here?

The best suggestion is to retreat to square one and start over. Westerners can be persuaded that mastery of a second, third and even fourth language can be useful. A spoonful of sugar in the form of courses in Ukrainian and German on the prairies, and Chinese and Japanese in British Columbia will make the French easier to swallow. A little money under the table to provincial departments of education will take care of that.

Unhappily for Ottawa, its bilingual lunacies have so curdled western sympathies that time will be required for the dust to settle. A priority of course will be to abolish the print industry boondoggle and phase out the labeling nonsense.

On the issue of enabling the French-Canadians to feel at home with their own government common sense would dictate that attention be focused where the issue is important. How unimportant it is in western Canada may be illustrated in this way.

In the CBC office in Calgary the only job classed as bilingual is operating the switch board. The only Francophone calls they receive are long distance from CBC Montreal. And there are only a very few of these.

Mika Replies

I should like to respond to the attack on my right to be a candidate for Saanich alderman which was printed in the Times Oct. 26 (Party, Labor Threats Face Councils: Bourque). Your story did not carry any comment from me, for a simple reason — none was sought. It is for you to judge the professionalism of such reporting. Anyone can judge the ethics. Fortunately, also, the relevance and validity of the acting Saanich mayor's conduct is for Saanich voters to judge as they inspect me and my platform during the campaign, which for all our sakes I fervently hope will be reported fairly.

From the outset of my candidacy, I hid nothing and expressed my belief that municipal elections are not and should not be extensions of provincial or federal contests. Let me repeat as vigorously as I can that I am a non-partisan candidate for office in Saanich, a community I love so much that I threw over an attractive newspaper caree in Ottawa several years ago in order to return here. I have lived in this community under the respected stewardship of Reeve Arthur Ash, a one-time Liberal MLA, of Reeve George Chatterton, a one-time Conservative MP, and Mayor Hugh Curtis, who now is a member of the provincial cabinet. Like these gentlemen did, without fear of scurrilous partisan innuendo, now that I hope to serve my community I seek the help and welcome the support of all Saanich residents who share my concerns about Saanich regardless of their personal provincial or federal politics. Unlike the acting mayor, I am sure most Saanich residents consider our community a family homeground, not an ideological battlefield.

Therefore, I find it sorrowful that an acting mayor who is not a candidate himself would attack me in order to inject partisan provincial politics into a local government election. Doubtless some will immediately conclude that he acted under orders of the political party to which he belongs, but I believe that highly unlikely. For one thing the fact of his party membership, which he either concealed or the story suppressed, reveals the transparent hypocrisy of the attack. I do not wish to play the same game and earnestly urge any who would support me to let this pass as an isolated and misguided action of a foolish individual.

After all, if it be true as the story claimed, that the acting mayor now is in favor of open council meetings then I hope he will reconsider and vote for me. Because the first and priority plank of my platform is introduction of a bylaw requiring all future council and committee meetings to be held in open session, except perhaps for preliminary discussion of personnel or land acquisition problems. and that all meetings be held in the evening so working residents may attend to hear the discussion of their business. Further, if elected, my bylaw would require publication of the agenda one week in advance and the minutes of decisions taken one week after each meeting, in the classified section of whichever newspaper tenders the lowest rate for this vital information service to Saanich residents.

I believe this action alone would go a long way to restoring the communication and confidence between residents and councils led by earlier reeves and mayors when the municipality was small enough to enjoy such two-way interchange without difficulty. As the municipality has grown, the distance between council and the community has grown, particularly in the last two or three years. It is the disturbing unhappiness with directions taken by this council, too often in the dark of closed or unannounced council sessions which has brought out such a large field of candidates this year. I seek the help and welcome the support of the acting mayor for a turnabout of direction towards a neighbourly and open community again. We live in a paradise so let the sun shine in. — John Mika, Candidate for Saanich Council, 1560 Mileva Lane.

Penalized Teachers

The teachers of British Columbia are being penalized for obeying the law. The Sooke district teachers were in arbitration as required by law before the AIB came into existence on Oct. 14, 1975.

By provincial law, arbitration awards between school boards and teachers are binding on both parties. Arbitration settlements were signed on Dec. 31, 1975 and the provincial government insisted that boards pay and teachers receive the arbitrated increase.

Knowing that these salaries might be reviewed by the AIB, no district attempted to obtain unrealistic increases but settled for salaries commensurate with the cost of living and comparable with those of others in similar employment in B.C. Although teachers requested that the percentage above the AIB guidelines be set aside in case the province decided to place teachers under AIB control, the premier refused to comply.

Finally on June 21, 1976 the premier decided that the salaries of provincial workers were to be governed by the AIB.

On Oct. 14, 1976, the AIB reviewed salaries in this district and declared a roll-back and pay-back were in order. Now, after eight months of abiding by the law, teachers are to be heavily penalized financially.

A segment of the wage earners, ever in the public eye, is again to be held up as the example for all to see what can happen to those who by obeying the law are wrong and wronged. Do you in all conscience support this punitive action by the AIB?— Sooke Teachers' Association.

Court Debts

Few would, I think, debate that Canadian citizenship consists of certain privileges and certain responsibilities.

One responsibility would be to respond when called for jury duty. To witness the dignity of the judicial process is, I believe, a privilege. It is a form of dignity certainly no longer emulated by our political process.

However, as a juror who served the Queen in June, I am, at present, still awaiting financial recompense. An appeal to the sheriff's office elicited the response: "You should receive a cheque in the mail next week." "Next week" has long since come and gone.

Therefore, at the princely sum of $10 per day, I feel I should enjoy the privilege of questioning the responsibility of the courts in abrogating their debts. — H. Ernest Bowden, 8574 Aldous Terrace.

Killing Games

This morning, (Oct. 26) in the 10-10:30 a.m. time slot, the CBC interviewed a gleeful man who has already entered the market with costly games to be hitched up to television sets. Due to their cost, and other factors, these are in any case objectionable.

I hope others will join in my particular protest — in the new year, this entrepreneur hopes to launch a game, similarly connected to TV sets, where "if you aim the bomber right, you sink a ship!" His assumption that it is fun to bomb and sink ships is certainly damaging to children. Ships contain people — are we to choose games that teach that it is fun to kill people?

All this was particularly ironic, as the interview followed news items, critical of the federal government's failure to provide Newfoundland-based rescue equipment, which might have saved lives lost from the Dutch freighter.

Before the proposed "games" reach the market, we must see them in perspective as damaging to children and endeavor to prevent their sale. — Clare McAllister, 302-118 Croft Street.

Japanese Apology

Many decisions taken in the last war may be lamentable in hindsight. I do, however, most strongly object to some SOB who would not fight for his country, apologizing for actions taken by honorable men who thought they were doing their best for the internal security of the country during the same war.

Perhaps some of this misdirected sympathy would be better directed to our Hong Kong survivors and other veterans. — H. Shergold, 360 Douglas Street.

Galbraith Clan

As your readers of Scottish descent will probably be aware, the International Gathering of the Clans will be held in Scotland next year as part of the celebrations of the Silver Jubilee of Her Majesty the Queen.

During the first week of May various events will take place in Edinburgh, and during the second week clansmen will disperse throughout Scotland to their own clan lands.

As laird of Culcreuch, the castle home of the Galbraith chiefs for some three hundred years, I and Lady Culcreuch want to ensure that all Galbraiths throughout Canada are aware of these events and that they will be very welcome to visit their ancestral home and take part in the events which are being planned here. These will include pipe and drum bands, Scottish country dancing, haggis tasting, Trips to Inchgalbraith and other places of interest to the Galbraith clan.

We wish to provide all interested Galbraiths or people of Galbraith descent or connections with full details of these plans and for those Galbraiths who will be unable to attend we are preparing a comprehensive illustrated booklet on the Galbraith history which covers all aspects of their ancestral castle and genealogy of their chiefs. So they, too, should write.

Wild Opinions

As an Ulsterman and an Irishman, I find little difficulty in refuting some of the wilder opinions postulated in the Victoria Times Oct. 20, in an article by Mary Holland. Firstly, in Ulster today Catholics and Protestants are not quarrelling with each other over matters of theology. There is no burning desire to convert the other side to the one true faith, nor does a member of one side strike a member of the other on the head with a cosh in the hope that he will thereby be purged of his theological errors and become a better candidate for heaven. No, as Liam de Poor said:

"The Northern Ireland problem is a colonial problem and the radial distinction (and it is actually imagined as racial) between the colonists and the natives is expressed in terms of religion. It goes perhaps somewhat deeper than that, for it is necessary to maintain the distinction in order to maintain the colony as a colony. It is true that the colonizing of Northern Ireland took place a long time ago; it is true, too, that there was a time when it seemed that distinctions might be merged in a happy integration of the descendants of settlers with the descendants of natives, but for historical reasons this tendency was reversed almost two centuries ago, and it has always since seemed to be to the advantage of somebody to keep Ulster divided."

Secondly, the government is not "composed of Catholics." Indeed, the percentage of non-Catholics in the Dail (parliament of Eire) is out of all proportion to their numbers in the state

Thirdly, if you visit a church in Dublin, you will not "have to fight your way out of the building at the end of the service against the queues waiting to get in." Nor will you meet "hordes of young people clamouring to enter St. Mary's on Haddington Road."

Forward-looking Ulster people believe, as do our fellow Irishmen in the South, that sooner or later Republican and Loyalist must reconcile their differences and unite to build a new, free and secular nation in the context of a greater European union. But as long as people like Mary Holland continue to see green bombs and orange bombs, instead of just bombs and bullets, widows and orphans, we can never put an end to our centuries-long tragedy.—David Hargen, R.R. 1., Victoria.

A Chat With John, Ralph

By SALLY QUINN
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Gielgud arrives first, Natty, you would have to describe him. Beautiful checked shirt, perfectly cut jacket. Just right for brunch.

"I'll have a bloody Mary." Then he says, "I've given up spirits, you know. He points with glee at the newly arrived drink. He reminisces. "It was during the period I was sacked from 'Irene.' I was so miserable I was drinking enormous quantities of Chivas Regal. I finally finished off a bottle before lunch and instantly passed out. I've only drunk wine since." He laughs and takes a sip.

Richardson appears in the quintessential English three-piece tweed suit. Marvelous walrus mustache. Very chipper. The polite exchange and "Good morning, Johnny, splendid morning isn't it."

It will be a Planters Punch for Ralph Richardson. "I always drink Planters Punch when I'm in America. Is rum fattening? I seem to be putting on weight."

Sir John and Sir Ralph are both in very good form. And for good reason. They had been particularly well-received the night before at the opening performance of "No Man's Land," the new Harold Pinter play at the Kennedy Centre here.

Neither of these two monuments of the British stage has been in Washington in a very long time and it is the first time the two actors, Richardson, now 74, Gielgud, now 72, had played together since they did "Home" in New York six years ago.

"I've never played in the Kennedy Centre before," says Gielgud. "But I did lay the cornerstone for it 10 years ago."

Gielgud met Mrs. Roosevelt in 1937 when he was here and "actually I was invited to have tea with her in the White House. I met President Johnson when I came to lay the cornerstone for the Centre."

"I met President Kennedy," Richardson says. "He invited us to a ball. I was playing in New York at the time, filming 'Long Day's Journey,' I believe. I remember telegraphing to London for my white tie. I was so struck by Kennedy's charming manner — his charming diffidence. And the whole party was the way one would make a little Christmas party. The ease and charm. Very charmful."

The waiter presents them with menus. They both decide that Eggs Benedict sounds delicious.

Then Richardson spies something called "Eggs Borgia." "Eggs Borgia," he exclaims, savoring the words. "That does sound rather sexy."

"I did my first porno film this summer in Italy with Gore Vidal," says Gielgud, brightly sticking to the theme of the conversation.

"It was Caligula. I refused the first part Gore offered me because it was so pornographic. Then he wrote me a very rude letter asking me to take the part of someone who disapproves of everything. So I did and I ended up in the film slitting my veins in the bathtub. I never did meet Vidal because he had a terrible row with the director and was banned from the set so he went off in a pet to Ravello."

The waiter brings a salad of fresh mushrooms. Richardson peers down at them as if they were some strange growth. "What's this?" he queries in surprise. Raw mushrooms? I say, I don't think I've ever had raw mushrooms in my life. Is this an American thing, raw mushrooms?"

"I don't think I have either," chimes in Gielgud.

Just then a plane flies over the Kennedy Centre and Richardson brings up flying.

"I've just done a commercial about the Concorde," he says obviously pleased. "Have you seen it? Beautiful thing isn't it? Have you noticed it making a terrible noise?"

"I think the Concorde is terrible," says Gielgud. "A terrible waste of money. And it can only be used by the enormously rich. And it can't be good for the body, going all that distance in only three hours."

"It's the only commercial I've ever done," says Richardson. He pauses. "I don't call it a commercial any more than I would call doing something for the theatre a commercial. Our Concorde belongs to every British citizen."

There is a silence.

They are asked how long they've been together, how they like working together, and whether they are and have they always been great friends.

They both brighten, anxious to get rid of the slight cloud the Concorde has cast over the Eggs Benedict.

"We're the brokers men in Cinderella," says Gielgud. "We're like the furniture movers. They always have two comics in the pantomine, it's an age old musical gag." Richardson begins to sing and mimic the furniture movers and finishes up rather proudly with Gielgud laughing delightedly along with him.

"It was in 1930 that we met and began working together," says Gielgud. "I remember that day and how we eyed each other suspiciously."

The two have collaborated in 15 productions and two movies.

"By the way," says Richardson. "I thought I'd given away your punch last night when I got the ending wrong."

"I was afraid you did at first," smiles Gielgud. Then he adds, "we're like old Lewis Gasson. He used to make the right noises in the right rhythm if he forgot his lines and nobody could ever tell the difference."

But getting old seems not to have bothered either one of them a whit, both are still acting as much as ever.

"It's awfully lucky for us to have moved into the avant garde theatre," says Gielgud. "Osborne and Pinter used to be young and they would write parts for the young. But suddenly they're getting middle-aged themselves."

"We've longed to play in Pinter," says Richardson.

"It's difficult for us," says Gielgud," to appreciate most avant garde writers."

"Ralph was a big star in films."

He scoffs. "I was never a big star."

"I'm too self-conscious for films," says Gielgud. "I knew I wasn't good looking enough to live up to the romantic image."

"We're used to the theatre," says Richardson. "You always learn a little something when you're in a play. You don't learn much in films."

Ironically, neither goes to the theatre very often.

"I don't go to the theatre much anymore," says Gielgud. "Neither does Ralph. If you don't enjoy the play and you're well known it's awfully embarrassing. And if the actors know you're in the audience they expect you to come around afterwards. You can usually tell by reading the notices whether it will be something you'll like."

They can't really name any young favorites in today's British theatre. "We were all mad about Paul Scofield," says Gielgud.

"But now he's getting old."

"There's Alex Guinness," pipes up Richardson.

"No, no, Ralph, he's a contemporary."

"I think of myself," says Richardson with a jolly smile, "as four light years old. But I don't really think about getting old."

"I'm lucky," says Gielgud. "I thought once that I'd probably end up in Hollywood playing old diplomats in films. I think," he adds with a wince, "it would be awful sitting around Hollywood waiting for death."

A Victory For Mankind

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

Late last month two cases of smallpox, like millions before them, turned up in Mogadishu, Somalia, on the Indian Ocean coast. But unlike all their predecessors these two cases, affecting a 16-year-old girl and a 70-year-old man, may be the last two cases of smallpox in human history. Perhaps there will be other last gasps by this once-universal scourge, like these two people in Somalia, or the seven isolated late in the summer in remote villages in Ethiopia. But if two more years of waiting and surveillance confirm what now appears to be so, the World Health Organization will be able to declare smallpox eradicated. That would be an accomplishment unprecedented in human history.

Scientific American, in its October issue, tells the story of this remarkable international effort undertaken by the WHO with the participation of the United Nations Children's Fund, of governments, health agencies and laboratories, public and private — including Toronto's Connaught Laboratories — and hundreds of thousands of health workers.

It was in 1959, on a motion by the Soviet Union — which later was a major force behind the campaign, supplying 140 million doses of vaccine — that the WHO called for eradication of smallpox.

When the campaign began in 1967 the disease was seen as endemic in 33 countries, and there were imported cases in another 11.

From the start the possibility of eradication depended on two essential characteristics of smallpox. It is transmitted directly from one person to another, in tiny droplets of moisture from the mouth or the nose. And there is no known animal or insect reservoir from which it can return to reinfect human beings. Thus, once eradicated from any population, it is gone for good, unless travellers bring it back from elsewhere.

The original strategy called for wholesale vaccination of the population of the affected countries. The theory was that if 80 per cent were made immune the incidence of smallpox would be so drastically narrowed that remaining cases could be effectively identified, isolated and the spread of the virus stopped. But it happened that, while awaiting delayed vaccine supplies in eastern Nigeria, William Foege, an American adviser, devised an interim strategy to eke out what vaccine supplies he had. Individual cases were identified and a quick and general vaccination program was undertaken in the area immediately surrounding each reported case. By the time the mass supplies arrived, there was no detectable smallpox left in Nigeria, although fewer than 50 per cent of the people had been vaccinated. Thus was developed the policy of surveillance-containment.

Other discoveries were more dismal. Incidence of the disease turned out to have been grossly under-reported. Participants in the campaign now tend to believe that the 131,418 cases reported in 1967 may in reality have been not much more than one per cent.

Still there was dramatic progress. By January, 1972, smallpox had been wiped out in the Americas. Indonesia's last case was isolated. Africa, but for pockets in southern Sudan and Ethiopia, where the program had started late, the Botswana, which had become reinfected, was clean. The only serious problem remaining was in Asia-India, Bangladesh, Nepal, Pakistan.

But that was a disaster area. In one state in India, which had been officially listed as free of smallpox, WHO workers trailing a source of infection stumbled on a major epidemic. Local health officials knew of it but had tried to conceal it.

Bangladesh was another horror story. Disastrous floods and famine in 1974 set hundreds of thousands of refugees in motion, gravely setting back efforts to contain the virus by isolating its victims. The Bangladesh government aggravated the difficulties in 1975 when it created 500,000 refugees overnight by razing the slums of Dacca with bulldozers. Yet by October 16, 1975, three-year-old Rahima Banu came down with the last known case of smallpox in the country, and the last known case of the more virulent form of the disease, variola major, in the world. It was a mild case — she recovered.

The vigil has narrowed down now to a handful of cases in Somalia and Ethiopia. Perhaps a few more are inevitable. But the miracle — as every generation before our own would have regarded it — is in sight. For our own skeptical and pessimistic generation it is a promising sigh that if mankind must have an enemy, if we can unite only for a fight, the enemy need not be our fellow man.

An Accessory To Murder?

THE NATION
An Editorial

At least two things are notable for their absence in the wake of the assassination in Washington on September 21 of the exiled Chilean diplomat, Orlando Letelier. One is any indignation by the administration of the sort that would stimulate energetic action on the part of the country's investigative agencies. The other, not unrelated, is any sign that obvious leads are being pursued by the FBI and other bodies charged with solving this atrocious crime.

On the latter point, it is widely and plausibly assumed that the only people with a clear motive for destroying Letelier are the members of the military dictatorship that now rules Chile. This distinguished diplomat served both as a minister and as ambassador to Washington in the Popular Unity government which the Pinochet junta toppled in a coup three years ago. He was the junta's outspoken opponent and a witness to its crimes, having himself been imprisoned and tortured. Chile's present ambassador, within sight of whose windows Letelier's car was blown up, has said that he and his staff were available to American police authorities for questioning. As far as can be discovered, they have not yet been interviewed by the FBI

This failure is inexplicable, unless one is to assume that the G-men have evidence that the Chilean government is involved in the murder, as many people believe, that the bomb may have been detonated electronically from that embassy, and that the police are waiting to clinch their case before asking the embassy people for their alibis. It is more likely that the government of the United States, through its police arm, is simply not vigorously investigating a violent crime of international significance that was insultingly committed on its very doorstep.

After all, the Allende government which Letelier served was overthrown with the strong help of the American CIA in a "destabilization" program managed by Henry Kissinger himself. In that action, by all accounts, including the report of the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence (the Church committee), the CIA and the Chilean military's intelligence arm, now known as DINA, became closely intertwined. They worked together and knew each other's secrets. Are we now to believe that neither the CIA nor the FBI was aware of the activities in this country of the secret police of Chile's friendly dictatorship?

Given this background of intimacy between the American government and the Chilean militarists, Americans are entitled to their suspicions about the zeal with which the investigation of this crime will be pursued. It is shocking to say so, but the inference is unavoidable. And there is confirmation from the bureaucratic world that the Ford administration is not acting with appropriate vigor in this matter. The day after the assassination, the Inter-American Development Bank officially granted a loan to the Chilean government (the bank is an international agency but American weight is preponderant in its councils).

There has been no talk of stopping U.S. aid to the Santiago regime. The American Ambassador there has not even been called home for consultations. Relations between the countries proceed as though nothing had happened. The Institute for Policy Studies in Washington, where Letelier worked, has asked Attorney General Levi to appoint a Special Prosecutor to handle this case, thus removing it from the area of routine crime and bureaucratic police rivalries. But the government so far has contented itself with the statement that an investigation is proceeding in proper channels.

LETELIER
. . . 'doorstep' death

As long as this complacency lasts in official Washington, Americans are forced to entertain the supposition that the Chilean dictatorship accomplished this official murder and that, by extension, our own government is an accessory after the fact. That is close to an unbearable thought for citizens of this republic.

Trudeau Has to Take the Rap

TORONTO STAR
An Editorial

If Quebec separates and Canada breaks up into three or four states, the man who must bear the major responsibility is Pierre Trudeau.

Charisma and pragmatism may be fine qualities for winning elections, as the Prime Minister has shown on three occasions and as he seems determined to take into a fourth.

But they are not enough to hold a nation together. For that there must be a sense of purpose, a national mission to feed the soul of the people.

At this task of nation-building Pierre Trudeau has been a failure. So when he warns that the country is in danger of disintegration over his policies, he should seek the solution within his own leadership rather than in the shortcomings of others.

Most Canadians keenly want to build their own society, one that provides economic and social justice and a distinctive quality of life from what they could get as Americans.

They have shown that given a sense of pupose, they are capable of great things. Given a sense of mission, they are willing to make sacrifices and accept hardships.

The history of Canada revolves around the struggle to retain a national identity against the forces of geography and climate, and to withstand the economic and cultural pull of the U.S. But without some feeling of what that identity is about, the struggle becomes meaningless. It would be easier to simply join the U.S.

This sense of purpose is precisely what they are missing from Trudeau, and it is at the root of why the country is so divided today. People don't know where Trudeau really stands, or where he wants to take the country.

The Star has strongly supported controls and bilingualism, the two major Trudeau policies now under fire.

But these are not ends in themselves. People will put up with them if they see them as part of a bigger picture. But if they are not part of an overall philosophy that leads the nation to better things, then they become devisive.

Canadians want bilingualism to work to keep Quebec within Confederation. But they feel unfairly put upon by the lack of a positive response from Quebec. English Canada has been lectured on its responsibilities by the prime minister. But it feels he has not sufficiently rebuked Quebec for proclaiming a unilingual goal while the rest of the country tried hard to make bilingualism work. Bilingualism has become a goal, requiring sacrifice, but people are not sure where it is leading.

The same case applies to controls. Business fears that Trudeau brought them in as a step towards a more regimented economy. Union leaders see controls as simply depriving workers of their rightful increases.

In fact, however, controls by themselves don't solve anything. They merely provide a breathing spell, and the rest of Trudeau's economic policies are not sufficiently clear to indicate where he wants to go. Interest rates that are too high, housing costs out of sight, a premium-priced dollar that makes it hard to export and thus to make jobs — these are hardly policies that will get to the root cause of inflation, which stems from the fact that society no longer can agree on a fair method of dividing national income.

No one suggests that today's economic or social problems are easy to solve. All the industrialized countries are going through turmoil. Some of the pressures, such as soaring world oil prices, are outside the control of domestic governments.

But some are doing better than others. And the hallmark of those enjoying the most success, such as Sweden and Germany, is a strong sense of national mission.

Trudeau appeared to be ready to provide this kind of purpose when he began to talk about the need for a new society.

But once again Trudeau backed off without revealing what he has in mind for the future. Once again Canadians find themselves divided because they do not know where the prime minister wants to lead them.

The Star agrees with Trudeau that Canada is sorely divided and that without enormous effort the country can split up over the tough issues it faces.

But there is enormous desire to stay together, even if that means taking some harsh medicine.

In this respect charisma and pragmatism are no substitute for strong leadership. Canadians, sensible and industrious, can put up with a lot if they know where they are going.

Trudeau says time is short to save Canada. He's right — but the deadline is on his own shoulders.

Let the prime minister fit his policies, especially controls and bilingualism, into a coherent philosophy, let him provide a sense of mission, and he can win support from the people.

The Pentagon has suffered a disaster — a fiscal disaster. the effects of it will not show up for a while, but it is catastrophic nonetheless to the aims of the defence establishment. It happened last month when that Russian Mig-25 landed in Japan, brought there by a defecting Soviet pilot.

This Russian "Foxbat" interceptor has been one of the Air Force's main weapons in the annual battle with Congress for money, more and ever more of it. It was described by an Air Force Secretary as "the best interceptor in production in the world today," one capable of blowing anything we put up against it out of the sky. Indeed, the Pentagon itself used this terrifying weapon — about which it knew almost nothing — to shoot down any attempts to check Air Force demands for new U.S. planes.

Now that ploy has been grounded forever. As Rep. Robert Carr (D. — Mich.) points out in The Washington Post, the MiG-25 we have now thoroughly examined is much inferior in a dozen ways to several of our own planes. Our own F-15 or F-16 can "out-climb, out-accelerate, out-turn, out-see, out-hide, and out-shoot the Foxbat . . ." Now what kite can the Pentagon fly when next it heads back to the defence-spending trough?

Canadian Builders Backed

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government has promised it will provide some guarantees for Canadian contractors who wish to bid on construction projects in the Middle East to enable them to go after bigger and more lucrative contracts.

Under plans announced by the industry, trade and commerce department, contractors will be able to put up bid and performance sureties without losing a large chunk of working capital.

These sureties, now demanded by most Arab countries, are posted as a guarantee of completion of work. Contractors must put up between five per cent and 10 per cent of the total value of a contract in cash before starting work and they lose the money if the job is not finished.

Until now, Canadian bidders have gone to banks for the money. The banks have deducted the amount of cash from the total credit available to a company. As a result, the Canadians have had insufficient capital to bid for some large contracts, although they were capable of performing the work.

This is because a contractor must spend considerable money on a project before he receives the first payment from his customer.

Now the government has expanded the General Adjustment Assistance Program (GAAP) to provide for guarantees. Banks will be told the government will pay 90 per cent of the losses incurred through the loss of bid and performance sureties of projects that have been approved by the industry, trade and commerce department.

A GAAP official said the guarantees will amount to about $25 million a year. That means they will cover up to about $250 million worth of business.

Halasz' Wife Says She Was Threatened Before Shots Fired

The wife of a man facing two counts of attempted murder told an assize jury Wednesday she was threatened by another woman shortly before shots were fired in Dockyard Recreation Club.

Magda Halasz was giving evidence in support of her husband Joseph Halasz, 44, being tried in B.C. Supreme Court for attempted murder last May 9, of Richard Cory Wallis Small, 32, and John Warren Ingham, 29.

Mrs. Halasz referred to an incident in the Dockyard Club the evening of May 9, Mother's Day, where she went with her husband who is a member of the Dockyard Recreation Association.

A man she did not know approached the table where they sat having a drink with off-duty military policeman James Edward, she told the court in a trembling voice.

"One guy came over and called my husband out. He kept saying, 'Come outside. Come outside.' "

She said she and her husband did not know what led to this approach.

Later a woman also unknown to her came to the table and asked her outside.

"She said, 'Come outside. I'll beat the . . . out of you.'

"I said, 'I don't know. I'm not going anywhere with you.' I was so shocked I couldn't stand up from my chair."

She had tried to persuade her husband to call the police earlier, and the accused testified he did finally go toward a pay phone to do this.

"The next thing I heard the shooting and everybody was running," Mrs. Halasz said.

She was asked in cross-examination by Crown counsel George MacMinn what her husband said when she suggested they leave the club.

"He just told me to relax, don't worry."

"What did he say when you advised him to call the police?"

"He don't say nothing."

"Are you afraid of your husband?"

"No."

"Has he ever beat you?"

"No."

"Have you ever complained to the doctor that he beat you?"

"No."

Final Crown witness was shooting victim Richard Small, confined to a wheelchair because of arm and leg paralysis caused by his wound.

He told of stopping by the Dockyard Club on the afternoon of May 9 where he drank about two double ryes before picking up his wife from her job at Gorge Hospital.

They both went to the club then and Small said he drank three or four more double ryes before closing time around 6 p.m.

After supper the couple returned to the club around 8 and were signed in by a man Small knew as John. Small said he had not known Halasz up to this time and his wife pointed the man out to him, saying:

"That was that idiot who was spreading rumors about her with regards to one of the patients at the hospital."

Small said he would go and have a talk with Halasz.

"She didn't want me to so I sat for a few minutes then went over. I told him I'd like to see him outside. He shrugged his shoulders first and said, 'what for?' I said I'd tell him outside."

He indicated then it was about rumors involving his wife, but the man referred to as John came over and told Small to "forget it."

"So I went back to the table and sat down," Small said. He had some more drinks.

Later Halasz came to the table.

"He asked me if I still wanted to go outside and I said I did."

They started for the commissionaire's desk near the door.

"Someone said, 'Rick, he's got a gun,' and I turned around and he was pointing a gun at me. John was following us out."

"In which hand was he holding the gun?" MacMinn asked.

"He was holding it in both hands. I just froze, right there.

"I looked over at John and told him to stay where he was. There was a fellow at the commissionaire's desk and I told him to phone the police.

"Then the shots were fired. I went down against the wall."

"What was the last thing you remember?"

"Joe was kneeling down pointing a gun at me and I passed out," Small said.

Before that evening he had never spoken to the accused, Small said.

Asked about his sobriety, Small said, "I could walk a straight line, I could drive. I wasn't pissed, or whatever."

In cross-examination, Small agreed with the suggestion that Halasz was someone who had got his wife into difficulty previously. Smith asked him what he said to Halasz when he went to the other man's table.

"I said, 'I'd like to talk to you outside.'"

"You said more than that, didn't you?"

"No, sir."

"Did you say, 'I'll fix you, you son of a bitch?'"

"No, I did not."

Introducing Halasz to the jury, Smith said it was "important to hear the accused Joseph Halasz and the events as he perceived them that evening."

He touched on the fact that Hungarian-born Halasz had seen military service under the Communists, had tried to escape Hungary, was caught, tortured and imprisoned and finally made his way across the Austrian frontier with his wife and child after the 1956 uprising, coming to settle in Victoria in June, 1957.

Smith said Halasz has a strong sense of family and a drinking problem associated with taking up a new life, although Halasz refused to admit to an alcohol problem.

On the day in question he drank some beer from pitchers shared with others at the club while they played pool, and later while with his wife.

After asking Edward to join his table, Halasz said, "somebody come over from the right hand side and touch my shoulder and ask me if I mind to step outside.

"I said, 'For what?' I thought he must be joking."

But later, when spoken to again, the man told Halasz, "It's no matter what I do, I haven't got a chance to go out from the club before I go out with him first."

He said he still did not know who the man was.

At this time Halasz said his wife became very upset and asked the man, "Why do you want my husband out?" The man did not reply, so Halasz went to the other table, "and they told me to . . . off."

At about this point Halasz used the telephone in the games room adjoining the lounge area, and while he was gone a woman went to his wife offering to straighten things out in the ladies toilet.

Halasz said his wife went to the commissionaire "because she was afraid something was going to happen inside."

There were gestures toward him from the table occupied by Small and his party.

A woman there was saying "Come on, chicken," Halasz said, and he feared harm.

"Look at the way they are looking at us," he told his wife.

He said he may not have been thinking correctly but he felt "the best thing was for my little girl to bring my gun down."

Halasz suggested his mind may have been in a blackout, but he thought if he had the gun and fired it into the air as he and his wife left, everyone would know he had a weapon, even though he realized he could be fined.

The gun, according to earlier evidence, was carried to the club by Halasz' youngest daughter, who handed it to him in a black pouch. The accused transferred it to a pocket under cover of his lounge table.

He said he had bought the gun for home and family protection after two women were murdered in Esquimalt about two years ago and thought of his wife: "Maybe same thing happened to her."

With it in his pocket he began to cool down, and at his wife's urging began to go toward the main door to use the pay phone to call police.

"Mr. Small saw me and came up beside me, held my arm and said, 'It's about time you made up your mind.' I said it was best to go back to table and sit down."

He said he noticed three others in the hallway, picked up the telephone and put a hand in his pocket for a dime, but Small pushed him and said he was not going to use the phone.

Halasz said he told Small to move out of his way and he didn't.

"So I pulled the gun out and pointed at him. This other man said, 'Put that toy gun away,' and took my arm.

"So I heard the shot and I see Mr. Small is on the floor. I turned and tried to say, 'look what you done.'"

"To Small?" Smith asked.

"To the other person who hit my arm."

Halasz said two persons grabbed him, with the gun still in his hand.

"I don't recall the second shot," he said.

He denied kicking one of the men on the ground but remembered being held by Edward, who asked him to put the gun down on a table. Then his wife collapsed.

"I'm ashamed of what has happened. I feel very upset," the accused said.

He never had a plan to shoot either man on going to the club nor when the gun went off, he said.

He admitted he could easily have called police when he called for the pistol.

"I was out of my mind," he said.

Family physician Dr. H. G. Ingram said he had treated Halasz steadily for 12 years and found him sometimes difficult, aggressive and argumentative, but a good family man although strict.

Alcohol was a contributing factor to some of his health problems, the witness said.

Immigrant Voters Blast Bourassa Language Act

MONTREAL — Liberal Premier Robert Bourassa was heckled Wednesday night by immigrant voters who want him to modify the way the province's langauge law is applied to their children.

Unless the children can pass English-proficiency tests, they must go to French schools under the law, which has angered Montreal island's substantial ethnic vote, heavily Liberal in the past.

"You are making the Europeans hate the French and the French hate us," Bourassa was told during a 45-minute meeting punctuated by loud heckling.

He was onstage with Municipal Affairs Minister Victor Goldbloom, who is campaigning for re-election in Mercier riding, which has a heavy immigrant vote.

Bourassa said no changes in the Official Language Act or the way it is applied will be made until Ombudsman Luce Patenaude has completed a study of how the law is working in practice.

The premier said it isn't clear whether the problem is with the law or the way it is being applied to school children.

The tests have been described as "odious" by Parti Quebecois Leader Rene Levesque, and Union Nationale Leader Rodrigue Biron has gained support from English-speaking voters by saying he would repeal the law if a Union Nationale government is elected Nov. 15.

Biron said Wednesday Prime Minister Trudeau has put the Bourassa government in "trusteeship" by having former federal cabinet ministers Jean Marchand and Bryce Mackasey run for provincial seats.

Mackasey, speaking in Kingston, Ont., said he will be the happiest Irishman ever born in Quebec City if Levesque is defeated Nov. 15.

In a speech to a Liberal association he said he is heartbroken about problems of language and national unity in Canada.

He added that he will illustrate in the next few days how he intends to win English-minority support.

He is running in the Montreal riding of Notre Dame de Grace, whose residents are 75-per-cent English-speaking.

Levesque, meanwhile, outlined plans to establish a public insurance corporation to lower auto insurance rates in Quebec.

He called the present auto insurance system a racket that costs Quebec drivers $100 million a year.

Computer Banks Draw Anger from Ontario

TORONTO (CP) — Sydney Handleman, Ontario minister of consumer and commercial relations, says the proposed electronic payments system gives the federal government an opportunity ot gain greater control over the individual.

"Ottawa should not expect that it can implement an electronic transfer system without the co-operation of the provinces, consumers and affected industries," he said at a conference.

Handleman said the system would involve automated bank teller machines, electronic processing of cheques, bank credits and receipts and use of bank card in stores.

This would mean the elimination of paper money transactions.

"Once the system is in operation, the federal government will probably take direct control of it through its unquestioned jurisdiction over the chartered banks," he said.

"It is likely that the electronic payments system will simply eliminate a number of smaller, regional financial institutions which cannot afford the cost of the technology."

Handleman said he does think the system will be widely implemented because he thinks consumers like using paper money and are suspicious of computers.

Most consumers do not want to buy goods with a bank card which automatically debits their bank accounts and credits marchants' accounts, he said.'

The use of banks cards would mean that consumers could not stop payment on defective items, he said, adding that the cards would increase the possibility of accounting errors.

Automated teller machines installed in some banks and trust companies are too complex and can make mistakes, he added.

Native Needs Ignored: Memo

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal manpower department operates in total ignorance of native people, says an internal government memo circulated in the department last summer.

The memo, written by Dan Goodleaf, says a department study paper on developing a mining manpower research strategy does not once mention the native people in 19 typewritten pages.

"A report such as the one above can only be viewed as irresponsible, and one that probably reflects where this department is at: Complete ignorance of native people," says the Goodleaf memo, written to Jean Lagasse, senior director of the special programs directorate.

Goodleaf was a policy consultant in the native employment division when the memo was written, June 4, and recently has become special assistant to Cam Mackie, assistant deputy minister of Indian affairs.

"The so-called departmental experts are not experts in the eyes of native people," the memo says.

"I can only once again deduce that this department operates in total ignorance and at times a nonchalant attitude with respect to native people."

It adds that the department's strategic planning and research division is in dire need of native experts.

Later, a brief report on natives in the mining industry was written.

It said native participation in the industry has been low and that natives in remote areas should be employed in mine activities.

Cash Aid Pledged

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government will provide Indians with funds for legal aid if their rights are infringed by Reed Ltd. lumbering plans in northwestern Ontario, Indian Affairs Minister Warren Allmand said Wednesday.

Allmand, answering questions in the Commons, would not say how much federal funding might be given but said his department has a policy for such cases.

Reed and Ontario signed an agreement earlier this week giving the paper company timber rights to almost 19,000 square miles, provided forest studies and the environmental impact of a proposed mill are favorable.

That area is almost as large as Nova Scotia and the company's plans have been bitterly opposed by the Indians.

Allmand was replying to Cyril Symes (NDP — Sault Ste. Marie) who asked if Ottawa will do everything in its power to nullify the agreement if Indian rights are jeopardized.

Asbestos Dangers Stressed

MONTREAL (CP) — Health dangers of the asbestos industry extend beyond mines and factories into the lives of all citizens, the International Federation of Chemical and General Workers' Unions convention was told Wednesday.

Automobile mechanics breathe asbestos fibres from brake linings, and asbestos has been found in the air near major highways, Charles Levinson, the federations's secretary general, told about 350 delegates.

Fibre has been found in French wine because the wine is filtered through asbestos, he said.

Levinson also said the federation has given moral support and supplied information to unions representing asbestos workers in the province.

North Oil Pollution Has Ottawa Worried

OTTAWA (FP) — Trouble with an exploratory gas well in the Canadian Arctic has created not only widespread public concern, but also a heightened awareness by Environment Canada of the need for even more research on pollution in the North.

The latest evidence of this growing concern is the impending announcement that the federal government has signed a contract with a private company for research and development of an "innovative technique" for controlling well blowouts on the ocean floor.

Bill Logan, project engineer for the government's Environmental Protection Service, describes pollution in the North as "a brand new ball game" requiring new rules and new equipment.

The contract expected to be announced shortly by supply and services, the department that actually puts out federal tenders, is aimed at combatting exactly the type of situation that arose in late September in the Beaufort Sea, 75 miles northwest of Tuktoyaktuk. That blowout fortunatuely was only water — a pressurized seepage outside the drilling shaft — but environmentalists expressed fear that a seabed oil blowout would have disastrous consequences for the delicate ecology of the North.

The well, being drilled in 190 feet of water by Canmar Corp. eventually was abandoned before sea ice closed in for the winter.

OIL COMPANY SEES MORE ARCTIC DRILLING

OTTAWA (CP) — Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. told the National Energy Board on Wednesday that the country still has a high potential for oil discoveries in the north and off the east coast.

But at the same time the company said the oil has not yet been found in commercial quantities and should be ignored by the board in its current deliberations on oil supply and demand.

In testimony at a hearing that will result in new limitations on oil exports for 1977, Gulf said the ultimate potential for oil discoveries in the western Arctic is six billion barrels. Most of the potential was under the Beaufort Sea.

Off the east coast, the potential is 15 billion barrels, the company said in its presentation.

The Poor Deserve A Hearing, Too

OTTAWA (CP) — A federal commissioner went to bat Wednesday for people too poor to afford telephones, suggesting they deserve a say in rate decisions.

Pat Pearce, a member of the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission, pressed counsel for the Onatario government at a commission hearing to outline what the provincial government is ready to do to help these people get their views across to the CRTC.

D. W. Burtnick, Ontario government counsel, said his government would be happy to help the CRTC set up a complaints service to handle such problems.

Two elderly ladies in Montreal, who appeared at a hearing in 1974, were probably more effective than groups such as the Ontario government in getting the transport commission to set up a two-price system for pay telephones — 10 cents a call in some locations and 20 cents in others, he said.

The CRTC is holding hearings on commission proposals designed to make it easier for the public to participate in hearings and get information on telecommunications issues.

Burtnick said the two elderly ladies in Montreal had told the transport commission how increasing Bell's pay phone rate to 20 cents from 10 cents would have a serious effect on them.

Dylan Sets Standard Difficult to Match

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

There are plays made for pondering, plays made for laughter, and plays made for tears. And now and then a play is constructed out of material that twines itself into that rueful and most appealing of blends — laughter and tears.

Such a play is Sidney Michaels' Dylan, which he has spun from the books Dylan Thomas in America by John Malcolm Brinnin and Leftover Life to Kill by Caitlin Thomas.

Dylan is brought vividly to life by the Victoria Actors Association in a production now at McPherson Playhouse. It is directed with dramatic force, imagination and technical skill by Allan Purdy.

Short though its run is (nightly until Saturday) and early in the season, the light that Dylan casts on the Victoria theatre scene is unlikely to be eclipsed in the coming months.

Powerful performances by Anthony Jenkins in the title role and Judy Bradshaw as Caitlin, rich verbal imagery peppering the script, broad and honest portraiture and perceptive and fluent use of stage space and lighting are elements that make this production memorable.

As the bawdy, alcoholic and eloquent Welshman who is celebrated as one of the poetic giants of our time, Jenkins is superbly cast, his rich voice with its Celtic overtones a joy to the ear.

With total conviction, he horrifies us while he charms us, moves us to ribald laughter and to tears and to a piercing comprehension of the ultimate tragedy of Dylan's self-destruction.

Judy Bradshaw's Caitlin, the tormented, alternately raging and passionate wife, is also a deeply felt, believeable interpretation, vocally excellent and physically ideal. Playing together, these two provide a duo performance that is taut, balanced and movingly real.

The episodic nature of the play and its focus on the emotional strife between and within the two Thomases does not permit of the rest of the cast to be much more than shadow figures.

Actually, the two acts are filled with small cameos throughout the multiple scenes, but only now and then are any of these notable.

Susan McCandless in the second half of the play shows strength; Jutta Woodland and Barry Bowman add vitality to a social scene but Jack Droy as the third-most important member of the cast, John Malcolm Brinnin who is responsible for Dylan's two fatal visits to America, needs to give his performance a bolder and more distinctive outline.

Production details such as costumes, sound effects and music are excellently handled. Dylan is a theatre experience not to be missed.

MILL LIKELY TO GET OKAY

COWICHAN BAY — Tentative approval by the federal fisheries department is indicated for a proposed mill and log sorting operation here.

A fisheries department spokesman in Vancouver said the proposal for a shake and shingle mill along with a haul-out and dry-land log sort operation on 10 acres near Doman's new Cowichan Bay mill had been examined.

He said the proposal would also have to pass a review by many others, including the environment and land-use committee.

The proposal was submitted by a mainland engineering firm on behalf of Island Shake and Shingle Ltd. of Lake Cowichan.

No Decision on Industry Park

No action was taken by the Capital Regional District board Wednesday on Saanich's industrial park proposal at Royal Oak.

The matter was on the agenda for third reading of a resolution supporting the plan but Victoria city council directors asked that it be delayed a week so city council can consider the proposal in more detail.

The proposal urges creation of a 124-acre industrial zone in the area intersected by Glanford and Vanalman. To effect the plan, 70 acres would have to be removed from the agriculture land reserve.

Saanich council has already applied to the B.C. Land Commission for the necessary exclusion.

Commission chairman Gary Runka said Wednesday he hopes to have a decision within the next two weeks.

Runka said research on the application has not been completed. When it is, the request will be put to the commission.

Clam Test Developed

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP) — University of Alaska scientists have made a discovery that could herald a rebirth of a commercial clam industry in the state, a university publication has reported.

Researchers at UA's Institute of Marine Science laboratory at Seward have developed a simple chemical test which can indicate the presence of paralytic shellfish poisoning toxin in clams, according to an article in the October issue "Now In The North."

The appearance of the deadly toxin, commonly associated with so-called red tide algae blooms in Alaska waters, led to a federal prohibition against the interstate shipment of Alaska clams in 1949.

The ban was forced because there was so simple process for determining if clams carried the toxin, which results from the iteraction of red tide with bacteria in shellfish.

However, a research project headed by Dr. Richard Neve, professor of marine science, and Dr. Paul Reichardt, associate professor of chemistry, "has made it possible to determine the presence of the toxin in a short period of time," the UA publication said.

Neve says the discovery is significant because there are no visible signs of the toxin which clams flush from their systems at different rates.

SAANICH REZONING LOTS TO PARKS

Three lots on Braefoot, one on Camrose, another on Vanalman and the three-acre Montague Park will be rezoned as parks by Saanich council.

The rezoning is being recommended by council's lands, planning and housing committee, which is made up of all members of council.

The committee decided Tuesday to delay rezoning five lots on Seymour, and lots on Bisley Place, Santa Fe Place, Francisco Terrace, San Miguel Place, Travis Place and Casa Marcia Crescent for parkland until the parks department and municipal administrator Bill Tremayne provide estimates on maintenance costs.

Lands commissioner Frank Harris told the committee the Casa Marcia Crescent site is being rented for gardening.

Once the lots are rezoned for parkland, Saanich must assume full maintenance costs.

CENSUS FIGURES DON'T TALLY WITH REGION'S ESTIMATES

Stats Canada, What Are You Doing?

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Preliminary federal census figures just don't jibe with regional population statistics and regional planning committee members want to know why.

They agreed Wednesday to ask Stats Canada for an explanation.

The action came after regional planner Pete Hammer told committee members the variations in the two sets of statistics range anywhere from 0.9 per cent to 17.6 per cent with the largest discrepancies in Victoria, Oak Bay, Esquimalt, Sidney and the Gulf Islands.

The figures show the Capital Regional District's population at 224,566 but the CRD puts it 15,139 higher, at 239,705.

Victoria's population according to census figures is 60,407 while the CRD's is 68,050, a difference of 11 per cent.

Sidney's population shows a variance of 10 per cent, with the census showing 6,464 people and the CRD's estimate at 7,200.

The population of the other municipalities in the Greater Victoria area with CRD's estimates in brackets are: Oak Bay, 17,450 (19,050), Esquimalt, 14,745 (16,100) and Saanich, 72,124 (74,100).

The population figures are closer in outlying districts. For instance the census shows 6,789 people living in Central Saanich. The CRD estimates 6,900, only 1.6 per cent higher. And in the Langford, Colwood, Metchosin and View Royal area the population is 28,576 according to the preliminary census, 28,850 according to the CRD, a difference of 0.9 per cent.

In North Saanich the figures are about as closely matched as they could get. There, the census records 4,621 people. The CRD estimates 4,625.

In Sooke the census indicates a population of 5,659 or 3.8 per cent lower than the CRD estimate. While on the Gulf Islands there is a discrepancy of nearly 18 per cent with the census showing 6,288 people, the CRD, 7,635.

Hammer said the figures cast "enough doubt on the way Stats Canada conducted its census" as to inform the federal government of the variance and ask for an investigation.

"When you look at the number of housing starts and other indicators there is a considerable discrepancy between what our information is and what Stats Canada has come up with," he told the committee members.

Hammer said on the basis of water consumption and water connections — one indicator to measure population — Greater Victoria's population would be about 195,300, compared with the preliminary census figure of 193,302.

Another indicator is the number of telephone connections, Hammer said. In 1971 there were 62,932 domestic connections and in 1976, 80,432.

If the ratio between population and connections remains the same in both years — and it normally does, he asserted — the population of the Victoria metropolitan area would be about 250,000.

Hammer also noted the anomaly of an increase in the number of housing starts in Victoria, which have risen 4,700 over the five year period, yet the census shows corresponding drop in population of 1,300.

"Perhaps its a change in life styles," he said. "But there still seems to be a considerable difference."

Hammer said an accurate census count is important because transfer payments from senior levels of government are based on population figures. In addition, regional board representation is determined by population, with one representative per 5,000 persons or fraction thereof.

However, Hammer and Victoria Mayor Mike Young, a member of the planning committee, agreed a drop in transfer payments would not necessarily have an adverse effect on the municipal treasury.

"The less we receive," Young said. "The less we would pay out."

Man Charged In Holdup

A 21-year-old man was charged in provincial court today with Wednesday afternoon's $120 holdup of the Royal Bank at Government and Fort.

Michael Filipchuk, of 1037 Lyall, entered no plea.

It was the second bank holdup in a week in the city. Police are still searching for the older man responsible for the Oct. 20 robbery at the Bank of Commerce at Yates and Government where nearly $2,000 was taken.

In Wednesday's robbery, the holdup man at one point pushed his way to the front of the line in the bank, but was told by the teller to go to the end.

He complied, waited his turn, and then demanded the teller hand over all her 20s. He said he had a gun. The teller put six $20 bills on the counter and the man picked them up and walked out.

In another holdup Wednesday, a man stole $120 from a clerk at the Mixer Shop in Nootka Court.

Police said the man posed as a shopper, but then pulled a knife and demanded the money from the till.

8,000 Ask Alternative At Lagoon

An 8,000-name petition calling for some alternative to the proposed solution to the pollution problem at Esquimalt Lagoon has been presented to the provincial government.

Frank Heinrich, 3504 Happy Valley Road., one of the organizers of the petition, presented it today to the Pollution Control Board when he met with board chairman Ben Marr.

Copies of the petition have been sent to Environment Minister Jim Nielsen, other cabinet ministers, opposition parties and the Pollution Control Branch.

The petition is the second assault on the Capital Region Board's proposal for solving a septic tank problem which is polluting Esquimalt Lagoon.

About two weeks ago a mock funeral service was held to protest the board's plan.

The regional board has applied to the PCB for a permit to install an outfall to carry away sewage from 70 houses in the Esquimalt Lagoon subdivision.

The outfall would carry the sewage 800 feet into the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

The petition says the board's proposal will destroy the natural beauty of the lagoon, present a hazard to health and disturb the ecology of the lagoon wildlife sanctuary.

It says an alternative solution has to be found.

James Campbell, Capital Region Board chairman, has said the proposal is the least unattractive alternative available to the board for eliminating a proven health hazard.

He says the outfall would be in operation for no more than five years. By that time the subdivision would be served by a sewer collection system that is to be connected to a proposed large outfall at Albert Head.

Those complaining about the planned outfall complain that the smell from a federal sewage outfall in the Belmont Park subdivision is bad enough.

The protesters claim the outfall would also lead to polluted beaches.

Marr said the procedure for getting a permit for such an outfall provides time for objections to be made and appeals to be filed if necessary.

He said the first step is that the application is made to the branch and advertised in the newspapers.

The application is then assessed by the branch and during a 30-day period, people opposed to the plan can voice objections to the branch.

The branch will then make its decision, granting the permit, rejecting it, or providing an amended permit.

Should the permit be granted, those objecting have another 15 days in which to launch an appeal to the Pollution Control Board. As a result of such an appeal, the board could hold public hearings on the matter, he added.

Marr said he wanted to make it clear to the objectors that there is a great deal of opportunity for them to register their dissent.

Board Has Developer in a Spin

Five years ago, Ridley, a partner in Ridley Brothers Development, bought 28 acres off Jacklin Road in Langford. Earlier this year he submitted plans to build a retail building supply store and warehouse on the site.

That meant he had to apply for a zoning change — from limited agriculture to extended commercial.

The advisory planning commission liked the idea, and approved the application subject to the provision of roadway dedications.

The technical planning committee, however, didn't like the idea. It rejected the application and advised Ridley to apply for a land-use contract.

Regional planners then took over. They noted Ridley's property is smack within a special development area for a proposed town centre.

While declaring Ridley's proposal "not necessarily inappropriate" the planners felt it was premature. They recommended rejection but suggested development might be permitted on a land use contract basis provided the development was of a "non-permanent, interim nature."

When the application finally came before the local planning and zoning committee Aug. 18, director Howard Drummond, of Colwood, moved to override the recommendation of the planners and have a bylaw prepared to change the zoning.

A public hearing was then held.

Wednesday the bylaw came before the regional board but members appeared uncertain what to do. The problem was only one director, Earl Pallister, had attended the hearing, and he was out of town.

Pallister's alternative, John McIlree, said he was loath to speak on the bylaw and Drummond remained silent.

Three Victoria directors — Mike Young, Murray Glazier and Alf Hood — expressed grave doubts about the bylaw and in the end, the matter was simply deferred.

"It kind of shakes you," said Ridley who sat through the meeting, "Just what do they want? They say they don't want strip zoning (building in strips along a highway). Okay. So now I come with a larger zoning proposal and they don't want that either.

"I'm only asking for rezoning to extend commercial. It's a lesser zoning than what the planners of the day zoned for themselves nine years ago. Then the area was zoned industrial. I'm not asking that.

"I just can't figure them out."

ASK THE TIMES

Q. Could you find out for me what year the Kingston Street School was built and is it really in good condition? M.S.

A. The school was built in 1883, a seven-room wooden building that became known as the James Bay Ward School. Unfortunately its condition could hardly be described as good. Its last enrolment was in June 1953 . . . and shortly after the school was torn down. Government offices sit on the site today.

Aquarium Urged In Old Crystal

A tropical aquarium should be included in a proposal to transform the abandoned Crystal Garden into a botanical garden, former provincial botanist Adam Szczawinski said today.

He was commenting on a proposal submitted to city council Tuesday by Ald. John Hayes.

An aquarium combined with a show place for tropical plants in the Crystal would complement the educational work of the Provincial Museum, he said.

Only a small number of British Columbians ever get a chance to visit Hawaii, the Fiji Islands and similar tropical places, he said.

While such a centre would be a tourist attraction, he said, the Crystal should be transformed into a plant and aquarium showplace for the "benefit and enjoyment of British Columbians."

"It would be an attraction for thousands of B.C. residents who visit the city and museum," he said.

Szczawinski said both the federal and provincial governments should provide financial assistance to restore and transform the Crystal.

"The University of Victoria should also take an interest in such a project."

He said it would be a serious mistake to tear down Victoria's "largest greenhouse."

He noted that Hayes in his proposal used the name botanical gardens.

"The name is somewhat misleading," he said, "as you need more land and space to establish a botanical garden. But the idea of using the Crystal to display tropical and exotic plants is excellent."

Oak Bay Rejects Harling Pt. Townhouse

A five-unit townhouse proposal for Oak Bay's waterfront was rejected by council on Wednesday.

More than 60 residents from the Harling Point area applauded council's decision.

The application was made by E. J. Bray to rezone his property at 2205 Lorne Terrace. Council also received about 20 letters opposing the application and a report from the municipal engineer that the development would require $16,000 worth of road upgrading.

Mayor Brian Smith said council's rejection of the rezoning application was in keeping with its policy against any high density development along the municipality's waterfront.

All This Paper for a $4 Bill!

Roy Messum of 1164 Highrock Place wonders if the city waterworks department has heard about the drive to save paper and energy.

He says the department is wasting money on expensive billing, particularly its use of jumbo-sized envelopes.

"What are we paying for — paper or water?" asks Messum, displaying a large envelope. "That's a lot of paper to tell me my bill is $4."

Messum is a member of the Institute of Public Administration of Canada.

"In this day when we are asked to save paper and energy, it is surprising to observe what the city is doing about the problem," Messum said.

The envelope is 10½ inches long and 5½ inches wide and contains a piece of carbon paper. The statement or bill is the same size and takes only six lines of print.

A smaller version of the bill used by various companies takes seven lines of print. They are one-third the size of the city's water bill.

Messum said he made inquiries and found the envelopes cost about $8,000 for 100,000.

"One firm found they were too expensive and instead hired two girls to type out the bills for two days at the beginning of the month," he said. "I understand postmen don't like them because they are too big and harder to handle."

"From what I have been able to find out, there is no reason for using such large and expensive envelopes," he added.

He's a Bus Schedule Pro

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

There are many champs in the Guinness Book of World Records, but a glaring omission is Ray Townsend of Santa Barbara, Calif., who claims four world records for bus traveling in the United States and Canada.

The old travelling man passed through Victoria Tuesday on his way home — the last lap of a 25,000-mile bus trip around North America which began May 5.

"I hope to be home soon and am looking forward to lunch with Dick Praul, a former city editor of the Victoria Times. Next year I will be off again," said the 76-year-old retired San Francisco garment manufacturer.

Since 1973 Townsend has travelled 250,000 miles — 210,000 by bus. The 40,000 miles were by ship, train and plane. Countries included 18 European countries, Mexico, Alaska and Canada.

His other bus-riding records are 11,000 miles in 15 days; 21,000 in 30 days and 36,000 in 60 days. All have been documented.

Ray Townsend . . . a travellin' man

He has become such a familiar person on Greyhound buses that he has been made a honorary bus driver.

"I can't drive, of course," he said. "It is just an honor."

Townsend started bus traveling after his wife died in 1973.

"I travel to keep from being bored," he said. "I ride at night so I can see the sights in various cities during the day. I never suffer from lack of sleep or indigestion."

"Apart from sleeping, "my spare time is spent working out bus schedules and connections."

He has no time to read on buses, he said.

Some of his trips have been adventurous, he recalled. In strife-torn Belfast he was shot at and later searched by soldiers at half a dozen checkpoints.

His favorite city is Vienna.

Where was he going next year?

"Oh! I guess I will do another bus tour of England, Scotland, Wales and Ireland," he said.

CANADA'S goalkeeper Tony Chursky tips ball over bar on drive by Mexico's left forward Leonardo Cuellar in World Cup soccer qualifying round at Toluca, Mexico, Wednesday. Canada Surprises

TOLUCA, Mexico (UPI) — Mexico and Canada played to a 0-0 tie Wednesday in the Northern area qualifying group for the 1978 World Soccer Cup finals.

As a result, Mexico moved into the next qualifying round of the world tournament while Canada and the United States must play each other again to determine the second qualifier from the group.

The U.S. and Canada were tied on points and goal average in the preliminary round. Mexico had the best goal average.

Wednesday's match was slow and defensive, with the home team badly off form in comparison with its performance against the U.S., which it beat 3-0 Oct. 15.

Canada, the underdog, might have won had a header from Brian Budd minutes after the start not hit the bar with Mexican goalkeeper Castrejon beaten.

Mexico also had a chance for victory in the 73rd minute when Antonio de la Torre fired a low, curving shot past Canadian goalkeeper Tony Chursky. The ball hit the bottom of the right post and was sent away by the Canadians, who beat Mexico 1-0 in Vancouver earlier this month.

Mexico had vowed it would avenge its earlier defeat by Canada. But the visitors showed a sophisticated and determined man - for - man marking system and the Mexicans were rarely able to play open soccer.

The winner of the next Canada-U.S. match will advance along with Mexico to another qualifying section with two Central American countries and two from the Caribbean.

Danes Thrash Cyprus Squad

COPENHAGEN (Reuter) — The strongest Danish national side since the early 1960s took 55 minutes to score its first goal against Cyprus, but went on to thrash the visitors 5-0 in their World Cup Group One qualifying soccer match Wednesday night.

After a 5-1 victory over the Cypriots in Limassol in May this year, the convincing win before a crowd of 30,000 at the Sports Stadium put the Danes in the lead in the group.

Stars Dig Toronto Deeper

By The Canadian Press

Injuries and overly-optimistic outlook have hurt Toronto Maple Leafs early in the National Hockey League season.

Before the season started, Leafs owner Harold Ballard said his team was ready for a run at the Stanley Cup. A first-round play-off series victory over Pittsburgh Penguins and a spirited seven-game semi-final loss to Philadelphia Flyers last season had fans and hockey watchers predicting bigger and better things for the Leafs this season.

The talk wasn't whether the Leafs could secure a playoff spot in the league's Adams Division, beating lowly Cleveland Barons, but whether they could overtake Boston Bruins or Buffalo Sabres for first place.

It's taken four weeks of late-game losses and costly injuries to bring the optimists back down to earth.

The Leafs are off to one of their worst starts, winning just one game in nine starts with three ties, good for five points and last place in the division. Their fifth loss of the season came Wednesday night, a 5-3 decision to Minnesota North Stars at Maple Leaf Gardens.

Toronto played without the services of right winger Errol Thompson, out with a broken wrist, and Claire Alexander, out with a knee injury. George Ferguson returned to the lineup after being sidelined with a bruised thigh but played below par.

Borje Salming, the Leafs' all-star defenceman, played with a nagging sinue condition that has slowed down his play.

Now the talk seems to be whether the Leafs can break out of the basement. They're already 11 points behind first-place Boston Bruins and three behind the Barons.

In other NHL games Wednesday night, Boston edged New York Rangers 4-3, Colorado Rockies beat Atlanta Flames 4-2, Montreal Canadiens and Chicago Black Hawks played to a 4-4 tie and Pittsburgh Penguins and Buffalo Sabres tied 4-4.

Following the game, coach Red Kelly announced the Leafs would call up goaltender Mike Palmateer from Dallas Black Hawks of the Central Hockey League to play against the Red Wings in a game tonight at Detroit.

"We're going to need a superb effort in goal to get us turned around" Kelly said. "Gord McRae didn't play a bad game, but lately it seems that every time there's a break around our net, the puck goes in."

The Rangers outshot the Bruins 41-23 but lost the game on Peter McNab's second goal of the game for Boston — a short-range goal with 4:25 remaining in the third period.

J. P. Bordeleau's second goal of the game, an eight-foot slap shot, lifted Chicago into a tie with Montreal.

One best: La Turin — One long: Miss Shelford

Times Staff

Two-year olds will command the attention of racing fans at Sandown Park in Friday's feature allowance event and eight of the best on the grounds will be working towards the Sandown Futurity later in the season.

The juevniles are new to Sandown this season and in the Rocky Point Farms dark bay filly La Turin, Island fans will be seeing a Stakes winner and the likely favorite.

La Turin's biggest win came in the Lassie Stakes on Sept. 1 when she held off her stablemate Fleet and Sweet by a nose in six and one-half furlongs, the same distance as Friday's feature which has been dubbed The Gay 90s Spare Rib House Purse.

La Turin has won three events and been in the money in seven of 10 races this season while earning $15,714.

Main opposition is expected to come from Jim Halkett's leased Winning Pool, a chestnut colt by Black Pool, who has won $3,237 in seven starts this year, and Autumn Purchase, a Kentucky-bred who ran at Longacres, near Seattle, earlier this year. His only victory came on a sloppy track, but he has been running against some of the top horses in the province since then.

The other entries are Woodbine Court, winner of one; Monday Special, trained by Vancouver Island's Roy Jewell; Fantastic Affair, a stablemate of La Turin's; Utmost, winner of one at the same distance; and My Son Eclipse, still a maiden.

Wednesday at Sandown, the cold weather came, but there was an inversion with it.

Despite the fact the crowd was down about 500 from the previous week, the mutuel play took a surprising upswing and $165,610 passed through the mutuels. This was $44,401 more than last year from a crowd of 2,076, which was 440 less than in 1975.

Which was all well and good and brought the seven-day total to $1,323,910 which is $77,711 more than the first eight days last year.

But in the jockey race department there was a switch. Leader Dale Manning was blanked for the first time while his closest rival, Randy Dailey, picked up one win to move within one of Manning's lead of 13; and last year's top rider, Garth Carter, came down in front with three to thrust himself right back in the picture. Carter now has six wins.

Carter, who plans a wedding after the Sandown meeting, won aboard Avec Plaisir ($8.00) in the third, Surrey Belle ($7.40) in the fourth and Secret Sovereign ($4.80) in the eighth. Dennis Wood won his second victory on Travelling Mist ($15.60) in the featured seventh and the result was an overlay as can be seen by the price, most selectors putting Travelling Mist on top. It was, in fact, the biggest price of the day.

Otherwise matters went more or less according to form, the biggest surprise coming in the first race when Soisbeau combined with Sweet All Over for a $126.50 exacto.

Saturday's feature will be the Sandown Special.

Form Chart is on page 17.

Kings, Chiefs Battle to Tie

By The Canadian Press

Brandon Wheat Kings salvaged a 5-5 tie with Kamloops Chiefs in one of two Western Canada Hockey League games Wednesday night.

In the other contest, Medicine Hat Tigers handed Lethbridge Broncos their first home loss of the season, 6-5.

The Eastern Division-leading Wheat Kings faced a 5-4 deficit with 20 seconds remaining in the game when Brian Propp tapped home a rebound by Dave Semenko to earn Brandon's first tie of the season.

The tie lifted Chiefs, who held period leads of 3-1 and 5-3, into a three-way deadlock for third place with idle New Westminster Bruins and Victoria Cougars.

Meanwhile in Lethbridge, Brian Hill banked a shot from the side of the net off Broncos' goaltender Rollie Boutin's stick at 10:28 of the third period to give Medicine Hat its fifth win of the season.

ISLAND STARS TO MEET CANADIAN RUGBY SIDE

Rugby fans will have opportunities to watch three top-calibre exhibition contests in Victoria before the current season is completed.

On Dec. 11, Vancouver Island Rugby Union all-stars will meet a select side from the rest of Canada in a match commemorating the 100th anniversary of the sport on the Island.

Early in 1977, Island all-stars will meet the full Canadian side here May 18, three days before the Canada-United States international match in Vancouver.

On May 25, the England under-23 team will play the B.C. Universities XV here. Three days later Canada will meet the visitors in Vancouver.

REDS TO PASS DRAFT

NEW YORK (AP) — The world champion Cincinnati Reds, the team with the best record in baseball, said Wednesday they will not participate in the Nov. 4 free agent re-entry draft.

The Reds already are loaded with talent, but Montreal Expos, who had the worst record in the major leagues this season, will be looking to fill some big holes when they lead off the historic draft for some of the best players in baseball.

Bob Howsam, president of the Reds, dropped Wednesday's bombshell.

"In fairness to the players who have won the world championship for two years in a row and with consideration to the way our organization is structured, we do not think it would be right for the Cincinnati club to get into the bidding contests that must come out of this draft," he said.

"Nearly all of our players have remained loyal to this organization and we are hopeful that we can maintain this relationship in the future to our mutual advantage," Howsam added.

Pitcher Don Gullett is the only Cincinnati player among the 25 free agents. He wanted a five-year contract with the National League champions, but the Cincinnati organization apparently felt a five-year contract for Gullett would trigger the same demands from the other stars on the team.

The Expos, however, don't have that problem. There are no real stars on the 1976 team, which posted its worst record since its first year, 1969.

The National League won a coin flip, giving the Expos (55-107) the first selection in the draft. The leagues, picking the reverse order of this season's won-loss records, will alternate selections.

Chicago White Sox will have the second choice. With Cincinnati passing, New York Yankees now will move up to the 23rd position, although they still will pick last in each round.

Whether slugger Reggie Jackson, the acknowledged cream of this year's crop of free agents, will be available when the Yankees come to bat is questionable.

Teams ahead of the Yankees must be pragmatic and decide whether they can waste a choice on Jackson, who has said he won't play in Milwaukee and Cleveland, and whose reported $3 million price tag may scare away some prospective shoppers. Also, some clubs might prefer to fill a weakness at pitcher, catcher or infield.

The Expos can lead off with Jackson, or they gamble that his elegibility isn't exhausted when they pick in the second round, the 24th total selection.

"We're very much interested in Mr. Jackson," Charlie Fox, the Expos' vice-president in charge of baseball operations, said Wednesday. "We've talked to him and he told us he would be receptive to any offer. He hasn't ruled out Montreal."

George's Dream of Glory Turned Into a Nightmare

RUGBY
max low

George Carson's dream didn't come true.

And both the B.C. players and Victoria rugby fans were delighted that instead, it turned into a nightmare.

For Carson, who hails from the tiny town of Downpatrick in Northern Ireland, last Saturday's Canadian championship match here for the Carling Bowl signalled the end of a five-year stint as Ontario rugby coach.

It was his last match.

And he wanted more than anything to go out in a blaze of glory.

Before the big match started, George was confident his dream would be realized — despite the fact that B.C. had drubbed his squad 43-6 to win the title last year in Halifax.

"Ah, but last year there was a feeling of apprehension as we made our way to Halifax," Carson explained in the dressing room. "This year, that feeling isn't there. This time the boys are confident!

"We hopefully have strengthened the front five in the forwards and are looking forward to a hard battle between the front rows," he said.

But what about B.C. coach Tillman Briggs' accusation that last year Ontario players were in "poor shape" and faded badly in the second half?

"I hope they are in a lot better shape this year," Carson ventured. "We've been working a lot on that."

As it turned out, they really weren't in much better shape — certainly not compared with Briggs' superbly fit squad — and the match followed almost the identical pattern of a year before. In Halifax, Ontario had looked good at the start. B.C. was held out for a long time and led only 9-6 at half time but piled on 34 points after the interval.

This time, Ontario played so well in the first 30 minutes that it gave B.C. players quite a jolt. The visitors led 6-0 at one stage and trailed only 7-6 at the interval. Then, there was that same old kind of second half with B.C. going on a spree for 28 points.

"Well," Carson rationalized, "we don't have as many dedicated rugby players to pick from as B.C. We may have as many people playing rugby as you have, but they're not as dedicated. I've met so many players from B.C. who have a super attitude to the game."

"George isn't sad to be quitting as provincial coach.

"I think five years is sufficient time to be in the job," he explained. "I'm chairman of the Ontario Coaching Committee, and I want to devote my full time to that."

But he did so much want to go out on a winning note.

"Well, Ontario won the national titles in 1972 and 1973 and that earned me two years as well as national coach in '73 and '74," Carson said.

"We won here in Victoria in 1972, my first year as Ontario's coach," he said whistfully as his team left the dressing room and ran down the corridor onto the field.

"... I'd like to finish the way I started."

Sorry George, but it just wasn't to be.

Bays in a Romp

Tom Hatcher fired 24 points, including 18 in the second half, to lead Oak Bay to an 85-56 romp over Victoria Junior Men in a Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League game Wednesday at Oak Bay Junior High School.

Bays never lost the lead and enjoyed a 39-27 advantage at half time.

Mike Taaffe added 14 points to the Oak Bay total and clubmate John Lauvaas also hit double figures with 12.

Charles Hunter (13) and Forrest Partington (10) were tops for Junior Men.

Eighth Straight For Unbeaten Vics

Victoria trounced visiting Belmont 15-4, 15-8 Wednesday to extend an unbeaten skein to eight games in the girls' division of the Greater Victoria High School Volleyball League.

Meanwhile, Spectrum moved into sole possession of second place with a 15-8, 15-12 win over Parkland, Oak Bay moved into a third-place tie with Belmont by tripping Reynolds 15-7, 15-9 and Esquimalt downed Claremont, 15-6, 15-13.

Spectrum and Claremont remained in an unbeaten deadlock for first place in boys' division play.

Spectrum downed Parkland 15-0, 15-7 and Claremont defeated Esquimalt 15-7, 15-8 while in other games Mt. Douglas topped Dunsmuir 15-7, 16-14 and Victoria High downed Belmont, 15-13, 15-3.

ARMSPARGER TO MIAMI

MIAMI (AP) — Bill Arnsparger was welcomed back to Miami Dolphins Wednesday, two days after being fired as head coach of the winless New York Giants.

Dolphins coach Don Shula, recently gloomy over his struggling team's 3-4 record, beamed as he announced that Arnsparger had returned to the National Football League job he left four years ago — assistant head coach.

Arnsparger, craftsman of the No-Name Defence that stopped Minnesota Vikings in the 1974 Super Bowl, had nothing to say Wednesday about his sudden departure from the Giants.

"I'm just looking forward to getting started again," said Arnsparger, 49.

Arnsparger's Dolphin defenders allowed only 150 points during the 1973 season that led to the Super Bowl against the Vikings. And in the 1972 season, which ended with the 1973 Super Bowl victory over Washington Redskins, they gave up 171 points.

Martin, Ozark Picked As Managers of Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Billy Martin, who restored pride in the New York Yankees' pinstripes and guided the team into the World Series in his first full season at the helm, today was named The Associated Press manager of the year in the American League.

Danny Ozark, who piloted Philadelphia Phillies to the National League East Division championship, was named National League manager of the year on Wednesday.

Martin received 16¾½ votes and edged Kansas City's Whitey Herzog by 9½ votes in the balloting by sportswriters and broadcasters. Gene Mauch of Minnesota Twins, former manager of Montreal Expos, was third with 20 and Chuck Tanner of Oakland was fourth with 15½.

"I appreciate this very much, it's a wonderful honor," said Martin, who also won the award in 1974 as manager of Texas Rangers. "I only wish that I could receive it as manager of the world champions."

Ozard, under fire throughout much of 1975, survived that crisis and then had to pull the Phillies through a near-disastrous slump in September this year to capture the first division championship for Philadelphia since the Whiz Kids won the pennant in 1950.

The Phillies were swept out of the National League playoffs in straight games. Ozark had 197 votes. Sparky Anderson of Cincinnati was second with 79 and Bill Virdon of Houston Astros was third with 55.

Cut fuel oil costs!

The amazing thermoshell Clean-Start Burner can reduce heating oil consumption by as much as 10%... it's just one important way we can help control your heating costs.

A more efficient design

Perhaps you thought one furnace burner was much like another? Well, that's certainly not true anymore!

Compared to conventional models, the new thermoshell furnace with Clean-Start Burner can reduce the amount of fuel you burn by as much as 10%. This advanced design is the result of our continuing program to find ways to conserve fuel.

How it saves fuel. Your furnace goes on and off thousands of times each winter. Every time it does, some fuel is not burnt efficiently. Result? Smoky flare-ups with energy-robbing soot deposited on burner, furnace interior and flue pipe. When it's shut off some oil may leak into the combustion chamber, too.

The thermoshell furnace overcomes these problems with a delayed start-up that allows a stabilized air flow/oil pressure to ensure split-second ignition. It also stops instantly on shut-off.

Our Clean-Start Burner has other advantages, too. A higher furnace efficiency than provided by older gun-type burners. And this efficiency can be maintained throughout the heating season. It also reduces soot emissions to the atmosphere.

If you're building a new home, or your furnace is on its last legs, give serious thought to this amazingly efficient furnace. If you pay $450 a year for fuel oil, it could mean a saving of $45!

Clean-Start Burner in action!

LEFT: The large, irregular flame from an old-style gun burner. RIGHT: You can see the Clean-Start Burner has a more intense and stable flame. It is also cleaner so there's less accumulation of energy-robbing soot.

How much fuel can you save?

Chart shows average efficiency of old-style burner-furnace units in a recent survey of Canadian homes. You can see that over 95% of the units were working below the 82.5% efficiency of our unit. In fact, 40% were working 10% or more below the efficiency of the thermoshell unit! (The average efficiency of all the homes was 72.5%). Now you know why we say that this amazing burner-furnace unit could reduce your fuel oil consumption by 10% or more!

Gulls Take League Lead

Juan de Fuca King John Gulls edged one point ahead of the pack by tripping Lake Cowichan Bairds Trucking 5-1 Wednesday night in a South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League game at Lake Cowichan.

In the other game, at Fuller Lake Arena, goaltender Tony Bruins of Kerry Park Islanders made 84 saves but still came out a loser as Fuller Lake Flyers bombed the Mill Bay club, 10-1.

Greg Chadwick scored three goals to set the pace for Flyers while Gene Wrigglesworth added two and singles were fired by Steve Mitchell, Rob Kadun, Dennis Young, Wayyne Wrigglesworth and Garth Doege.

Andy Nash and Ken Johnson scored for the Islanders and Fuller Lake netminder Brnet Harrow had a relatively easy time with 14 stops.

Late Welfare Cheque Charge 'Callous'

Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm today termed "callous and erronous"' suggestions Wednesday that his department has changed its welfare cheque issuing policies to collect more bank interest on its money.

"This story has evolved from rumors from callous and politically motivated social workers in Victoria who are attempting to frustrate the welfare system," the minister said in a press release.

His comments follow charges by Marilyn Callahan, president of the B.C. Association of Social Workers, and Sharon MacBain of the Community Action Group.

They charged today changes in the issuing date of welfare cheques are being instituted and would prove a hardship to recipients.

MacBain said she believed the move was simply to enable the depar;tment to collect additional bank interest on its money.

"That's absolute nonsense," Vander Zalm said. "There's no policy change. Cheques will be out on Friday as usual."

Vander Zalm agreed, however, his deparmtent is attempting to standardize the cheque issuing procedure which varies widely throughout the province.

He said a new policy, will come into effect next month in which welfare cheques will be delivered the first day of the month except in cases where the first day falls on a weekend and then the cheques will be distributed on the nearest previous banking day.

"Essentially the new policy will bring some consistency and rationale to a somewhat chaotic system,"

SAANICH GETS BILL

Saanich taxpayers will have to pay almost $1,000 to clear up an eyesore left on the boundary of Passmore Place, developed by the provincial government's Dunhill Development Corporation.

Arthur Davies of 701 Daffodil has been pressing Saanich for help in screening a zero lot building that Dunhill built on the property line near his home. Because the ground was raised by Dunhill, he claims there is a risk of flooding.

Municipal planner Gil Laurenson told the lands, planning and housing committee Tuesday it will cost $945 to rectify the situation and provide screening for the Davies' property.

"I approached them (Dunhill) three or four times this year," Laurenson said, "We can't get anywhere. They tell us they turned over parkland and a great deal of money."

Laurenson said parks superintendent Frank Andrews did not have enough funds in his budget to pay for the work.

The aldermen agreed, however, the $945 must be found from municipal coffers.

"If any other zero lot buildings come up I'll jump up and down like an idiot," Ald. Sandy Noel said.

The committee agreed the land-use contract being contemplated for Dunhill's proposed Roy Road housing project, should be carefully prepared to avoid duplication of the Passmore Place problem.

ACHIEVEMENTS OF AGED PRESERVED

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. (AP) — A project in Sioux Falls seeks to record and preserve human events of the elderly.

The Sioux Falls Oral History Project plans to interview at least 200 persons aged 70 or older. The 90-minute tapes will be copied, indexed and stored at the Senior Citizens Centre here and at Augustana College.

The tapes will be available for schools and community organizations and will be used for research at Augustana.

The project now has a file of more than 500 names of prospective persons for interviews.

The interviewers plan to record each month about five persons who have anecdotes to tell.

Already on tape are recollections of:

—An 80-year-old couple who remember neighbors eavesdropping on the party telephone while they were courting.

Police Really Earned Pay

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—The men in the bobby-style helmets and capes who carried truncheons on street patrols in this old port would try to separate the bare-chested Saturday night brawlers in the 1930s.

But mainly it was a matter of "picking up the scraps after the fight," recalls John Lawlor, who was breaking in with the Newfoundland Constabulary in those days.

The veteran officer, who retired Sept 30 as chief of the constabulary which retains many symbols of the London police force after which it was patterned, said the trouble in those days would begin with roving groups of men touring the waterfront bars.

Called hop beer shops locally, these establishments would dispense the "poor man's champagne" at two cents a glass.

After visiting six or eigh spots in the lower downtown area, some of the merrymakers would emerge "stripped to the waist and ready to take on whoever came by."

While alcohol was the main problem in those days, crime became more sophisticated as St. John's grew in 45 years from 35,000 persons to more than three times that number, Chief Lawlor said.

However, he remains convinced that this is basically a law-abiding city and he has always been opposed to arming the police. It is one of the few forces in North America which does not carry firearms as a matter of course.

He efphasized, however, that policemen must be well-trained in the handling of firearms in case of necessity and maintained that the members of the constabulary are comparable to city policemen anywhere in the country.

Pointing to the eight-hour shifts worked by members of the force today, with provisions for overtime payment, he recalled how happy he was to be making $2 a day in the 1930s. Other men who could not find work were receiving six cents a day in welfare payments.

Working hours stretched almost around the clock in those days and a policeman wanting a night off in a given month had to apply for it and hope things would not be too busy or that a more senior officer didn't want the same night free.

"You'd better believe times have changed. . ."

The constabulary in those days functioned as a police force for all of Newfoundland. Today it covers only the metropolitan St. John's area.

Lung Tests Lagging

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Lung Program was set up in 1974 to determine whether periodic examinations of men who feel healthy could detect lung cancer early enough to improve the survival rate. But it is running up against an unexpected obstacle—a deficiency of suitable volunteers, reports Dr. Myron R. Melamed, chief of cytology at Memorial Hospital here and local director of the program.

"To be statistically meaningful the program must follow 30,000 men—10,000 at each of three hospitals—over a 5-10-year period, but it has still not reached that target."

The program is receiving $13 million from the National Cancer Institute. The participating hospitals are Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Centre, New York City; Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn.; and Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, Md.

All volunteers are given comprehensive annual chest x-rays at no cost. Because the special x-ray machine used develops the pictures on-the-spot, additional pictures can be taken from different angles immediately if any abnormality is perceived.

"Memorial has enlisted volunteers through TV and radio publicity, newspaper ads and direct mailing. But it is still a long way from its goal of 10,000-12,000 volunteers," Dr. Melamed said.

"To date we have diagnosed 61 cancer cases among 6,600 volunteers at Memorial—twice as many as we expected. But nearly all of them can be treated by curative surgery. And we think we can boost the survival rate from eight per cent to anywhere from 50 to 80 per cent.

"Since the program is a free service and requires only one 30-minute visit per year, we're surprized that more men haven't volunteered," said Dr. Melamed, who emphasized that the vast majority of volunteers will never get lung cancer.

CLOTH TALK

by Peter George

Do you have a hop-sack garment in your wardrobe? It is such a staple fabric that probably every man has at least one he has been wearing with great satisfaction.

The unglamorous name is derived from the basket weave construction — normally 2x2 or 3x3 warp rows over the filler or weft rows. It is an excellent cloth for crease retention and wrinkle resistance. These qualities make it popular as both a slack and suit material.

We are extremely proud of our new SAMUELSOHN hopsack suits. They are available in both brown and blue heather tones that are practical and fairly priced. This fall season, the 3-piece suit sells for $275.00.

As usual with a SAMUELSOHN garment, the tailoring is impeccable. The lapels are hand-stitched, collars and sleeves are expertly set and finished. These garments are fully lined and the jackets have that handy extra inside pocket for cigarettes or spectacles. Treat yourself to quality at a fair price.

11 to 2
Sat., Oct. 30

Murder on 'The Canadian' is Eric Wilson's first novel and he has been lucky enough to have the collaboration of fellow Canadian Tom McNeely, who has drawn the illustrations.

Great Gift Idea!

Eric Wilson, a new Canadian author, a former B.C. teacher, who found lack of Canadian content for his students has written his own adventure/mystery that points out that Canadian kids can have fun too, and proves it with his young red-headed hero Tom Austin who finds himself in the midst of a curious mystery on the Canadian that tests his detecting abilities and brings him to near disaster. All while the train moves west to Vancouver.

Not Sexy . . . Just Sensual

SEATTLE — All Neal Lekwa wanted to do was sell quilts filled with goose down. But when women's lib backers took a gander at Lekwa's advertisements showing a lovely young lady snuggled under one of his comforters, the quilt seller found himself ducking charges of being a sexist. "We're sensualists, not sexists!" insists the 34-year-old president of Scandia Down Shops. Miffed because the University of Washington Daily, the school's student-run campus newspaper, has refused to carry his advertising, Lekwa has decided to appeal to the school's board of publications.

"We did not intend our ad to have sexist overtones by using a girl under the down comforter," he said. "By using a man or a rhino under the comforter, we lost some of the tactile message about down comforters feeling sensational. As soft as we know a girl's skin—or whatever—to be."

SEASIDE, Ore. — Richard Peterson went for a physical checkup, was shown to an examination room and told to wait. He did — for what seemed like an extremely long time. When he finally emerged he found himself in trouble with the police. Peterson said a clinic staff member took him to the room and left him. A while later, hearing no sounds outside the door, he went out to investigate. It was 6:03 p.m. and he was alone in the clinic. His efforts to leave touched off a burglar alarm. A police officer was waiting when Peterson got out. He was released after a clinic doctor confirmed his story.

LONDON — Phillis Fishwick will play for her crime of shoplifting, a London magistrate's court ordered. Mrs. Fishwick, 63 and a grandmother, admitted stealing a shoulder bag and tights worth $26.16 from a store, but told the court she was distraught over a relative's death at the time. When the probation officer said she was a talented jazz pianist, Court chairman Sir Eric Miller said she should do 100 hours of community service, spent playing the piano at social clubs for elderly persons.

CAMPBELL, Calif. — Kenneth Williams is going into the taxi business — in a first-class way. His five-cab fleet will use only Rolls Royces and Bentleys with liveried chauffeurs. The city council this week approved a taxi permit for Williams, who will charge $45 an hour for the service.

HOLLYWOOD — Comedienne Totie Fields, who lost 64 pounds following the amputation of a leg, plans to resume her stage career in Las Vegas next April. "People love me for my jokes and humor, not for my fat," Miss Fields, now a svelt 117 pounds, said Wednesday in an announcement of her future plans. The show business veteran, who underwent surgery for removal of her left leg last April, tried on a prosthetic leg at Cedars-Sinai hospital for the first time Wednesday.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Things just haven't been the same for Jim Staton since he cut off the mayor's water. Staton, an employee of the Kansas City Water Department, went to the home of Mayor Charles Wheeler last week for what he considered a routine water turnoff. The mayor had owed $66.76 for more than 60 days, and department rules call for a cut-off when a $60 bill becomes 30 days past due. Staton said Wednesday that when he returned from the Wheeler house, he was met by a supervisor who told him he would probably be fired. City Hall was hot, Staton was told, and somebody's head was going to roll. The mayor's tap was dry for six hours before the water was turned back on. Staton wasn't fired, but this week he was transferred to another job, which pays the same, but involves what he called "dirtier" duties. "I won't be turning off water anymore. It's a dirtier job. I'll be crawling in trenches, repairing broken water mains . . . stuff like that," he said.

Admiral Dies

PARIS (AP) — Admiral Georges Cabanier, the first French naval commander to join the Free French forces of General Charles de Gaulle in 1940, collapsed and died early Tuesday at his Paris home. He was 69.

Julius Schmid and the Liberated Woman
For the past decade the burden of contraception has, for the most part, been the woman's responsibility. However some of the more recent birth control innovations have not been entirely satisfactory. As a result women are looking for an effective alternative.
At Julius Schmid we make prophylactics. You have probably seen our displays in drugstores. They have proven to be one of the most effective forms of birth control. And they have no side effects. In fact, recent product developments in brands such as Excita and Fiesta can add an entire new dimension to intimate relationships.
If you'd like to know more about our products, just ask your pharmacist.
And liberate yourself.

Crosby Crooning for Church . . .

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Bing Crosby is giving a benefit concert in this glittering gambling town — to help a priest move his congregation out of a saloon.

Crosby, 71, who played a priest in several films, will perform without fee on Nov. 26 to raise money for construction of the Holy Family Catholic Church, producer Bill Loeb announced Wednesday.

"He's even going to buy his own plane ticket," Loeb said.

"He wants the church built . . . He wants to be part of it."

Crosby and his family, who live in Hillsborough, a suburb south of San Francisco, will fly here to entertain what Loeb hopes will be a sellout crowd of 7,500 at the New Alladin Theatre of the Performing Arts.

The pastor of the church, Father Ben Franzinelli, said he was "most grateful" for the Crosby benefit, "and those words don't seem to express my personal feelings."

Father Franzinelli now holds five services each Sunday in a local country and western saloon.

THE KING SWINGS

PRAGUE (AP) — It was almost like old times at the Paramount Theatre in Manhattan's Times Square when Benny Goodman showed up for a concert in the Czechoslovak capital.

Police had to cordon off the entrance to Lucerna Hall to try to hold back gate-crashers for the performance by the 67-year-old King of Swing and his orchestra. At least 1,000 people were turned away at the ticket booth despite high prices.

Inside the hall the audience was packed in close rows of seats, hanging in clusters from balconies and jammed to the walls in the standing area. Just before the clarinetist started playing, gate-crashers took over the aisles and squatted on the floor to hear Goodman's classical jazz.

Lucerna Hall normally seats 2,000. A policeman said 4,000 were there.

Goodman told reporters at the Intercontinental Hotel that the Czechoslovak audience had been "terrific."

FAMILIAR FACES TOP SASKATCHEWAN POLLS

Canadian Press

Saskatoon got a new mayor Wednesday in Saskatchewan's civic elections by virtue of the retirement of incumbent Bert Sears but in Regina it was the familiar face of Henry Baker in the mayor's office.

In Saskatoon, Cliff Wright, a 10-year vetean of council, handily defeated Col. Bruce McCorkell, 62, a personnel officer at the University of Saskatchewan, to take the mayor's seat. Former mayor Bert Sears did not seek re-election.

Saskatoon voters turned down a proposed $6.2-million sports centre, were in favor of retaining the ward system — in a close vote — and strongly supported keeping open the municipally-owned Wildwood golf course.

In Moose Jaw, Herb Taylor, 55, was returned to the mayor's choir.

Gurney Cleared But Still Not Happy

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — Former U.S. Sen. Edward Gurney, cleared of the last of the charges he thinks may have resulted from his defence of President Nixon on the Watergate committee, is relieved but he isn't happy.

The Justice Department "blackened my name, bes- ruined me economically," he ruined me econofically," he said Wednesday.

"It ought to be called the department of injustice," he said.

Gurney, 62, criticized his prosecutors Wednesday after he was found innocent by an eight-man, four-woman jury of the last of seven charges brought against him in 1974 in the investigation of an alleged influence-peddling scheme.

Strange Ways to Show Her Love!

Huntey, 31, has asked Judge Francis Barry to order Dorothy Darby, 38, to stop harassing him.

Mrs. Darby, who used to date Huntey, is charged with:

—Threatening to burn the house of Huntey and his mother while both were inside.

—Telephoning his grandmother and falsely telling her that Huntey had burned to death in a fire that also destroyed his home.

—Calling his employer and saying that Huntey was sick and wouldn't report for work.

—Cutting or slashing the tires of his vehicles approximately eight times.

Stephen Sokol, Huntey's lawyer, said his client and Mrs. Darby had dated several years ago but reportedly broke up in late 1973. Sokol said the harassment began in January, 1974, and has continued since.

Mrs. Darby has an unlisted telephone number and was unavailable for comment.

Huntey said his insurance company has threatened to suspend his coverage if additional destruction occurs.

Judge Barry set a hearing for Nov. 3, at which time Mrs. Darby will have a chance to answer the charges.

"She wants him to marry her and apparently thinks this is the way to achieve her goal," Sokol said.

Estate of Recluse Goes to Orphans

DALLAS (AP) — Two children whose parents were murdered will be the beneficiaries of a recluse who died without a family, say trustees handling the man's estate.

"I believe if old Elia Gervetch could see Billy and Mary Ann getting his money, he would be smiling," said Frank Haughton, a trust officer at Republic National Bank of Dallas.

Gervetch had stipulated that his estate go to an organization to help the blind and to two orphan children.

A final decision has not been announced, but trustees of the Gervetch estate at Republic National Bank of Dallas said the children will be Bill Locklear, 3, and Mary Ann Locklear, 2.

They were found last June 15 in their ransacked home, living on bread crumbs. In the house were the bodies of their parents, Billy and Hazel. Police said they apparently were killed three days earlier. Two men have been charged in the slayings.

Neil O'Brien, Gervetch's lawyer, declined to disclose the amount of the trust, but said it is enough to "enable them to get an education."

"It will not make them rich," he said.

Chicken Dish Puzzle Solved

New York Times

For years we have pondered the name of one of the most famous chicken dishes served in Europe. It is called pollo pepitoria, or chicken pepitoria, and is a specialty of Le Provencal restaurant in Juan-les-Pins in the Alpes-Maritimes, in France. Only recently did an acquaintance unravel this mystery. "The name stems from pepitas, the Spanish word for pumpkin seeds," he explained.

The confusion, we suppose, lay in the fact that the dish, more often than not, is made with almonds rather than pumpkin seeds. We have tried it with pumpkin seeds, which are available in health food stores, as well as with almonds, and either way it is delectable. So are the two other chicken recipes printed here, both saute dishes — one made with potatoes, the other with mushrooms and rosemary.

POLLO PEPITORIA
(Chicken pepitoria)

Two 2½-to-3-lb. chickens, cut into serving pieces
Salt and freshly ground pepper
4 thick slices French bread, about 2 ozs.
1 Tbsp red-wine vinegar
6 Tbsp olive oil
40 to 45 shelled but unblanched almonds or one-third cup pumpkin seeds
6 whole cloves garlic, peeled
1 bay leaf
2 cups hot chicken broth
¼ cup mayonnaise (see recipe)
1 Tbsp lemon juice.

1. Sprinkle the chicken pieces with salt and pepper to taste and set aside.

2. Trim the crusts from the bread and sprinkle each slice with equal amounts of vinegar.

3. Heat four Tbsp of oil in a heavy skillet and add the bread, almonds, garlic and bay leaf. Cook, turning the bread and shaking the skillet, until all the elements are golden brown. Remove the bread, garlic, almonds and bay leaf and add them to the container of a food processor or electric blender. Leave the oil in the skillet. Blend the bread and garlic mixture. Scrape the mixture into a bowl and add the hot chicken broth. Blend well.

4. Add two more tablespoons of oil to the skillet and add the chicken, skin-side down. Cook until golden and turn. Cook for a total of 15 minutes. Pour off the fat.

5. Pour the bread and broth mixture over the chicken and stir. Cover and cook about 15 minutes longer.

6. Blend the mayonnaise and lemon juice and stir this mixture, little by little, into the sauce. Serve piping hot. Do not boil after the mayonnaise is added.

Yield: Eight servings.

MAYONNAISE

2 egg yolks
2 teaspoons wine vinegar
VINEGAR
1 Tbsp imported mustard, preferably Dijon or Dusseldorf
Salt and freshly ground pepper
2 cups peanut, vegetable corn or olive oil
1 Tbsp or more lemon juice.

1. Place the yolks into a mixing bowl or the bowl of an electric mixer.

2. Add the vinegar, mustard and salt and pepper to taste.

Yield: About two cups.

CHICKEN SAUTEED WITH MUSHROOMS AND ROSEMARY

2 two-and-one-half to three-pound chickens, cut into serving pieces
Salt and freshly ground peppers
Three-quarters pound fresh mushrooms
2 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons finely chopped shallots
1½ teaspoons chopped fresh or dried rosemary
½ cup finely shredded ham, preferably prosciutto, optional
¼ cup dry white wine.

1. Sprinkle the chicken pieces with salt and pepper to taste.

2. Wash the mushrooms and drain. Pat dry. If they are small, leave them whole; otherwise, quarter or slice them, depending on size.

3. Heat the butter in a heavy skillet large enough to hold the chicken in one layer. Add the chicken pieces, skin-side down, and brown well, about five to seven minutes. Turn and add the mushrooms. Continue cooking until golden brown on the other side, about eight to 10 minutes.

4. Sprinkle the shallots between the chicken pieces. Sprinkle with rosemary and the prosciutto. Add the wine and stir until the wine starts to evaporate. Cover and continue cooking 10 or 15 minutes longer or until chicken is tender and cooked through.

5. Baste the chicken and serve it hot with the mushrooms and pan sauce poured over.

Yield: Six to eight servings

CHICKEN SAUTEED WITH POTATOES

10 to 12 small, waxy, red-skinned or white potatoes, about three-quarters of a pound
10 to 12 small, waxy, red-skinned or white potatoes, about three-quarters of a pound
Salt
1 three-and-one-half-pound chicken, cut into serving pieces
Freshly ground pepper
2 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon chopped fresh or dried rosemary
½ pound fresh mushrooms quartered or sliced
2 teaspoons finely chopped garlic
3 tablespoons finely chopped parsley

1. Peel the potatoes and drop them into cold water to cover. Drain and add to a saucepan. Add cold water to cover and salt to taste. Bring to the boil and simmer five minutes. Drain.

2. Meanwhile, sprinkle the chicken with salt and pepper to taste. Heat the butter in a heavy skillet and add the chicken pieces, skinside down. Brown well and turn. Sprinkle with rosemary. Continue cooking until golden on all sides, about 10 minutes.

3. Add potatoes and cook gently, turning the potatoes until they are nicely browned. Add the mushrooms and continue cooking, stirring as necessary, about five minutes. Sprinkle with garlic and stir. Serve sprinkled with chopped parsley.

Yield: Four servings.

FOOD & nutrition

Gourmet Economy Dish In the Eye of the Round

Here is a delicious way to serve the family a hot meat meal while still remaining within your budget. This recipe is easy to make and if there are any leftovers you can turn them into hearty hot or cold sandwiches.

2 garlic buds, peeled and cut into 2
1 bay leaf
¼ cup peanut oil
salt and pepper
4 tomatoes
2 tablespoons fresh chopped parsley
½ teaspoon thyme
⅓ cup bread crumbs
1 tablespoon butter
4 apples, peeled, cored and sliced
1 tablespoon brown sugar

Preheat the oven to 500 degrees.

Rub the beef with the garlic. Break the bay leaf into small pieces. Make shallow incisions in the beef with a small paring knife and insert a small piece of the bay leaf into each cut. Brush the beef with oil, and season with pepper. Place the beef in a roasting pan and brown the beef for 20 minutes. Reduce the oven heat to 350 degrees, season with salt, and roast the beef until done to your taste.

Total roasting time, including 20 minutes at 500 degrees: 15 minutes per pound: rare, 18 minutes per pound: medium.

Cut the tomatoes into 2. Place the tomato halves into an oiled baking dish. Brush the tomato halves with oil. Sprinkle on salt, pepper, parsley, thyme and breadcrumbs. Broil 10 minutes, in the middle of the oven. Melt the butter in a saute pan, add the apples and brown sugar, and saute over high heat until golden.

CRANBERRY CAKE

18½-ounce package yellow cake mix
½ cup cornstarch
1 teaspoon cinnamon
2 eggs
½ cup corn oil
½ cup cranberry juice cocktail
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup coarsely chopped cranberries
½ cup chopped medium-fine walnuts.

In the large bowl of an electric mixer stir together the cake mix, cornstarch and cinamon. Add the eggs, oil, cranberry juice and vanilla; at low speed beat until moistened. At medium speed beat for 3 minutes. Fold in cranberries and nuts. Turn into a greased 10-inch angel cake pan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in centre comes out clean — 60 to 70 minutes. Cool in pan on wire rack for 10 minutes; loosen edges and turn out on rack; cool completely.

Back Washer

TORONTO (CP) — A device that makes back-washing easier has been put on the market. An Ontario Christmas-tree grower has devised a sliding bead inside a tube of plastic netting which a bar of soap in place. Two loops at the ends of the tube are used to pull the soap back and forth. The new product is called Soapbox.

SAUCE FOR TONGUE

1 cup commercial sour cream
⅓ cup bottled white horseradish, just as it comes from the jar
1 medium McIntosh apple cored, peeled and finely grated
½ teaspoon grated lemon rind
1 teaspoon sugar
¼ teaspoons salt

dear abby

Whistling on Bill?

DEAR ABBY: I'm in the process of having some root canal work done, which is no picnic, but that's not my problem. It's my dentist. While he works, he whistles through his teeth.

I wouldn't mind a little Herb Alpert or Burt Bacharach, but no, my dentist keeps whistling "Easter Parade" over and over again until I am ready to scream!

Not only that, but he calls me "Mrs. Grassfield," and my name is Mrs. Greenfield.

Should I deduct 20 per cent from my bill for aggravation? —MRS. GREENFIELD

DEAR MRS. GREENFIELD: You could try. Maybe he's already added 20 per cent for entertainment.

DEAR ABBY: I recently moved to this city to be near my married son and his family. Although my son and his wife have many fine traits, they use foul language that I find very offensive.

I frequently babysit with their children (ages 5 and 9), and I am horrified to hear these children use the same vulgar four-letter words their parents use.

I have told my son and his wife it offends me, and I've asked them not to allow their children to talk that way, but they say I'm old fashioned and prudish, and everybody talks that way today. (Do they?)

I was also told I'm not to discipline their children because that's the parents' job.

Have our values become so depraved that clean speech, modesty and respect for others no longer exist? What am I to do? — HEARTBROKEN

DEAR HEARTBROKEN: You can decline to babysit with your grandchildren. Clean speech, modesty and respect for others still exist in some homes, but unfortunately not in your son's.

DEAR ABBY: A woman who belongs to my bridge club recently made a needlepoint sampler bearing the following message: "NEEDLEPOINT HAS REPLACED SEX!"

She framed it and hung it in her den where we play bridge.

A 50-Year-Old Story of Friends

elizabeth forbes

The Green Lantern Gift Shop, on Fort Street, near the Oak Bay junction, locked its door for a last time, almost a month ago.

That, in itself, is not headline making news. Indeed, I can almost hear you say — just another small business closing its books for personal or economic reasons.

Go back a matter of 20 years however, when the shop first opened. Sit, as I did the other day, with Ruth le Lacheur and Emly Borghy, who kept the Green Lantern door open against increasing odds after a third partner, Winifred Heath, died 11 years ago, and you come up with a story that starts back another 30 years and is highlighted by the long arm of coincidence that brought the trio together in the first place.

It will be half a century, next January, since Miss le Lacheur left Guernsey in the Channel Islands, for what was to be a short visit to a great-uncle, then living in Orillia, Ontario — Stephen Leacock's town.

About the same time, Miss Borghy travelled from her native Denmark to see a friend who had immigrated to the northern United States.

Before returning home, they both decided to see something of Canada. And, for a start, chose Toronto, where they believed they could find work.

Ruth le Lacheur arrived there first. She checked in at a red-bricked YWCA, where nearly every woman travelling alone in those days preferred to stay.

She too, found work, with the Kent-Fairweather Company, then considered outstanding in the apparel field.

The two young women met almost immediately in the "Y" lounge.

"We both could speak some French and that may have brought us together in the beginning," Miss le Lacheur suggests now.

Emly Borghy, who also speaks Danish fluently, quickly added "but we also found we had much in common and we liked each other right away."

Living in Toronto then was Winifred Heath, a keen golfer and accomplished musician.

A little over 12 years later, when her husband died, she decided to look for a couple of business women to share her comfortable bungalow, situated off North Yonge Street, on the edge of historic Hog's Hollow.

The two friends (still working in Toronto) saw her advertisement. They answered it, were accepted, and moved in.

"We spent some happy years in that bungalow," Emly Borghy told me the other day.

She continued her work in the apparel store; Miss le Lacheur eventually opened her own dress design shop "with a number of interesting customers" and Mrs. Heath parlayed her interest in golf into the prestigious position of secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Ladies' Golf Union.

It was in that capacity that she journeyed out here in 1956 for a CLGU tournament at Royal Colwood Golf and Country Club.

Within hours of her arrival she was telephoning back to the others that she had fallen in love with Victoria and would like to live here . . . would they consider coming along.

"By the time Mrs. Heath got back to Toronto, we had our answer ready . . . we would accompany her if that was what she wished," Ruth le Lacheur remembers.

As soon as they arrived the three friends decided "to go into something together."

That "something" materialized as the Green Lantern at the Fort Street location where a drugstore (and a post office) had recently closed.

"We applied to continue the post office . . . were accepted . . . and within weeks we were in business."

In the beginning all three spent their days at the gift and card shop, at the same time maintaining a home on Verrinder Avenue.

Mrs. Heath became organist and a choir leader at Douglas Street Baptist Church; Miss le Lacheur sang in that choir (today she attends and sings at First Baptist Church) and Miss Borghy became a member of the Lutheran Church.

Some years back a move was made from the Verrinder place to the present bungalow on Belmont Avenue "mainly to be within walking distance of the shop."

About that time, Mrs. Heath's health broke and her death came in 1965. Then Miss Borghy fell and fractured her hip. Arthritis set in and she had to remain home.

"I carried on virtually alone from then on," Ruth le Lacheur says, "until a month or so ago when we suddenly decided to close the door, while we still could enjoy life."

Emly Borghy, with Ruth leLacheur

After all, she added, "I've been in business six years longer than most people work today".

Emly Borghy looked across at her friend, nodded approval and said "and there's a lot of things left that we hope to do together."

That, I would suggest, speaks well for a friendship started by chance and that has lasted for over 49 years.

Postscript—The two friends are looking forward "hopefully" to going to Guernsey next May, to mark the 50th anniversary of Ruth le Lacheur's departure from there and to visit her two sisters, one of whom will soon be 90 years of age.

There is also a 90-year-old Borghy sister living in Denmark whom Emly has visited on several occasions.

Computer Important Tool

your health

By LESTER COLEMAN, M.D.

How are computers being used in medicine? We are studying this is school—J.T.

Dear J.T.:

Computers and other modern scientific instruments are really a great boon to mankind, not only in the field of commerce, but in the field of medicine as well.

Epidemiology is the study of epidemics of diseases. This highly technical science traces the origin of a disease and how it is spread to all parts of the world.

Computers are used extensively so that, with great accuracy, an epidemic of a disease can be anticipated and prevented. The best illustration of this is the planning for the prevention of a swine flu epidemic.

Not only in the study of epidemics, but in other branches of medicine, data processing devices can now feed into a computer factors like heredity, genetics, and emotional, physical and chemical variables to predict the possible onset of diseases.

Predictions of health can be made when a computer is given the patient's age, weight, height, indulgence in fatty foods, use of alcohol, cigarettes and drugs, and occupation.

When reliable information is fed into a computer, it can outline the need for exercise or the need to change one's occupation habits, or to reverse eating and smoking habits.

Computers play a vital role in the study of the blood and its many components. Scientists and physicians are placing a great deal of faith in the contributions that can be made by computers and other electronic devices.

The future will undoubtedly hold even greater promise fo the value of computers.

DENTURE PROBLEM

QUESTION:

I am in charge of a home for senior citizens. A number of the residents are troubled by constipation. Why does constipation tend to become more common as a person grows older?

ANSWER:

There are several reasons for this. The diets of older people tend to contain less fibre and less fluid than those of younger people. Both fluids and fibre or roughage are important parts of the diet because they help to produce a soft stool which is easily passed. Most older people should drink 8 to 10 glasses of fluid daily, including milk, fruit juice, soups, water and other beverages. It is also wise to eat plenty of the foods which provide roughage: fruits, vegetables, whole grain cereals and whole wheat bread. Older people with dental problems or poorly fitting dentures often eliminate fibrous foods from the diet. However it is advisable to chop up these foods, so they can still be eaten, and better still, to obtain properly fitting dentures.

Getting regular exercise, such as walking, is another way to keep muscles in shape and avoid constipation.

QUESTION:

I have recently heard that women who take birth control pills need vitamin supplements. Is this true?

ANSWER:

Research is continuing in this area. To date there is some indication that there may be an increased need for folic acid, vitamin B12, B6 and other B complex vitamins and some minerals. However regularly eating a diet containing fresh vegetables, organ and other meats, whole grains, peas and beans, dairy products and fruits will take care of any increased nutrient needs. Another reason why vitamin supplementation should not be undertaken without a physician's permission is that iron, calcium, and vitamin A will actually be retained in larger amounts from foods because of the "pill." A multivitamin preparation will contain vitamin A and excess retention of vitamin A can be harmful.

QUESTION:

I have often heard that one should not discard the liquid from canned vegetables. What is the nutrient content of the liquid?

ANSWER:

Approximately one-third of the vitamin and mineral content of the vegetables is contained in the liquid. The liquid can be saved and used in gravy, sauces and soup.

Finger-Lickin' Good? This One's Better

In late August Janet C. wrote saying ". . . my four-year-old son said my chicken is better than K..... F.... I guess that's the best compliment a Mom can get, hey?"

I have procrastinated about testing her coating inherited from her husband's aunt in Newfoundland but could have kicked myself for neglecting it so long for it is great. I tampered with it a little bit to please myself and our tasters here but I'm quite sure Janet will forgive me. I merely reduced the amount of salt and pepper and strong spices a little.

NEWFOUNDLAND FRIED CHICKEN

4 cup-up frying chickens

Dry Mix:

4 c. flour
1 tsp. dry mustard
1 tsp. onion salt
1 tsp. turmeric
¼ c. salt
2 tbsp. pepper
3 tbsp. M.S.G. (accent)
2 tbsp. meat tenderizer
1 tsp. garlic powder
1 tsp. curry powder
1 tsp. ground cloves
1½ tsp. finely crumbled sage

NOTE: It is important to mix all above ingredients thoroughly.

Dip: (sufficient for two fryers)

1 beaten egg
1 c. milk

Wash then cut frying chickens into serving pieces. Shake off excess water. (Do not dry.) Dip chicken pieces in egg-milk mixture beaten together. Shake off excess egg mixture and dip in spice coating.

In a heavy pot heat ½" oil to 350 deg. Fahr. and fry 4 pieces at a time on both sides —until golden—about 5 minutes. Drain well on paper towels. Transfer to large baking dish. Continue until all required pieces are golden and in baking dish. Bake at 300 deg. Fahr. 45 minutes. If chickens arelarge they may require 1 hour.

Tip all leftover spice coating into containers with tight lids and store in refrigerator until needed for next fried chicken dinner.

Commercial Baby Foods Differ in Processing

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Although commercial baby foods seem to be entirely different from foods the rest of humanity eats, in truth, they are not. Like adult foods, they are made from fruits and vegetables, grain products and meats. Like adult foods, they can contribute substantially to preotein intake, although unlike the typical North American diet, they are high in carbohydrate and low in fat

The major difference between comfercial baby foods and adult foods (or, for that matter, homemade baby foods) is the way they are processed. First, baby foods are broken up into very fine particles in a process called comminution, which is similar to what a blender does in your own kitchen. They are diluted with water, so that they have a semi-solid or liquid consistency, and sterilized an important plus for commercial baby foods — so that they will keep safely at room temperature until they are opened.

Some combination baby foods, like "dinners" or desserts, which contain several starches added to hold the various components in suspension and make their consistency more uniform. Otherwise, they would separate in storage into a watery and a solid layer that would be hard for the baby to seat and not be very attractive for a mother to look at. Single-ingredient foods, such as moist cereals, fruits or vegetables, are less likely to require starch to hold them together.

Baby foods also contain salt, sugar and other additives — some to improve the shelf life, others for flavor (to please the mother's palate, not the baby's), as do many processed foods for adults.

Thanks to consumer pressure and professional recommendations, monosodium glutamate has been removed from infant foods and the content of salt reduced substantially (although it could well be removed entirely, in our opinion).

Less progress has been made in reducing the sugar content even though there is little evidence that very young infants prefer high sweetened baby foods. Plus, there's good reason to suspect that feeding sugar at such an early age may result in increased consumption of sweets in later life, with a higher risk of dental caries and obesity. Baby fruit juices, fruits, creamed vegetables, desserts and puddings all have added sugar, as sucrose or dextrose. One happy note on this score is that a large baby food company has recently test-marketed fruit products with no sugar added. Let's hope they soon are nationally available.

Many parents think young babies, like themselves, will become bored if they are not given extremely varied menus. This is a totally unfounded fear. Furthermore, it may also be one reason why mothers are feeding solid foods at a younger and younger age, when all the evidence indicates that babies do just as well on breast milk or formula until the age of four months, or even six months, if they are given supplements.

The truth is, the food preferences of young infants are not as highly developed as those of children more than a year old (when eye appeal, variety and different flavors become quite important). In fact, the nutrient needs of a baby can be met by eating a few well-chosen baby foods such as dried cereals, unsweetened fruits and fruit juices, plain vegetables, plain meats and, of course, breast milk or formula. Either commercial products or homemade foods prepared with scrupulous cleanliness will fill the bill. Gourmet menus are not necessary — just good, clean food fed with plenty of tender loving care.

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

Dear Lynn and Joel: I recently bought a plant that my florist told me was a Lily-of-the-Nile plant. Frankly, he didn't know a thing about how to take care of it and suggested I look it up in a plant book. I couldn't find anything, and before it starts to die from lack of attention — right or wrong — I hope you can tell me how to treat it. — M.H.

Dear M.H.:

Your plant is botanically known as Agapanthus and is an evergreen or deciduous perennial with thick rootstocks and fleshy roots. Grow in good, warm, indirect light, making sure not to put it in direct sun where the leaves might burn. Use a loamy soil, although the plant has been know to thrive in heavier soils. During the growing season water profusely, and then taper off during the winter months.

MARK TRAIL

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

There are players—almost exclusively in the domain of duplicate and tournament bridge—who do not open four-card major suits. When they open a major suit, they guarantee at least five cards in that suit. This approach has its advantages in duplicate bridge, where there is much more competitive bidding than in rubber bridge, and it is frequently most comforting for responder to know that opener has at least five spades or five hearts, thus enabling responder to raise opener with but three cards in the bid major suit.

During the past few years, there have been some players who have experimented with opening three-card major suits. The only advantage that I can think of in doing this is that it lends more spice to the game (while making everybody neurotic). An example can be observed in today's deal. At its conclusion, the East-West players were observed to be muttering to themselves.

After cashing the king and queen of spades, West led the spade ace, which South ruffed. The jack of trumps was then laid down, with a successful finesse being taken against West's queen. Dummy's ace and king of trumps were cashed next, leaving East with the sole trump remaining in the deck.

Declarer now proceeded to play diamonds, with East ruffing the fourth diamond lead. When he next led a low club, declarer played low from the South hand, with the board's ten taking the trick. And so declarer's only losers were two spades and a trump.

Without any doubt, declarer had to be lucky to fulfill his contract. Not only did the seven adversely held trumps have to be divided 4-3, with West being the possessor of the queen, but East also had to have been dealt the queen of clubs, so that it was finessible. Nevertheless, the fact remains that four hearts was the only makeable game contract in the North-South hands.

All of which proves that on a given day, any bid can be the winning one.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Friday, October 29

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The unorthodox is featured. You get off beaten path. Friends become "something more" — routine is out and the unusual is "in." You're able to let go of past and to take sure steps into future. Specifically, you're released from obligation which prevented progress.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Creative opportunity exists—but you should check legal rights, permissions. One who seems flexible may decide to be stubborn. Accent on commitment, ability to imprint style, to inspire confidence and detect "hidden clauses."

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): What seems a roadblock or dead end is merely a chance for emotional breather. Open lines of communication. Be receptive. Don't attempt to force issues. Time is on your side. You will learn through teaching process. Aquarian is very much in picture.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Obtain hint from Gemini message. Display of versatility could work wonders. You're able to learn truth, to see proof that one who means much to you cares — deeply. You have a revelation. You know what should be done — and you're able to do it.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Emphasis on public relations, longterm commitment, marriage. You're able to plan, build, discover what is real as contrasted to wishful thinking. Key is to welcome truth when you encounter it. You'll be asked to make major revision — and it is for your benefit.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Low key approach is best — member of opposite sex becomes ally. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. You may have to retrace some steps — in so doing you meet a fascinating individual. You're asked to evaluate a special service.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Warmth replaces desolation — you are needed, involved. Taurus, Scorpio persons could be in picture. Question of finances, as its affects family and home, will be examined. Be receptive, diplomatic. Young person means well but could be extravagant.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Refuse to be misguided by one who tells talks out of school. Stick to factual information, not gossip. Protect your interests. Check basic material. Be sure of solid structure. Aura of personal magnetism dominates —people are drawn to you and make no secret of it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov.22-Dec. 21): Plans subject to quick change especially where visits and relatives are concerned. Cancer, Capricorn persons figure prominently. Your ideas can now be transformed into viable, profitable concepts. Know it and proceed accordingly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Get rid of expense which is unnecessary and brings nothing in return. Aries, Libra persons could play key roles. Accent on what you own, owe, have coming to you. Long-distance message or call lifts spirits.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Lunar cycle is such that you can assert yourself, can gain favorable attention from higher-ups. Be independent, original and give full rein to creative potential. You look and feel better — and others tell you about it.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Romantic interlude is a distinct possiblity. Intuitive intellect works overtime. You sense, feel — you learn by teaching. You make decison which some consider bizzare. The unorthodox is now a favorable course. Follow it!

IF OCTOBER 29th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are a natural teacher, psychologist and an affectionate, caring individual, passionate in beliefs, willing to do battle for a cause and, more often than not, siding with the underdog. Aquarius, Cancer and Leo persons play important roles in your life. You get chance for new start, opportunity to erase past errors in November. If single, you could have married this year. Business and added responsibilities were featured, especially in September. You are continuing to go places!

Soft Tomatoes? Frost to Blame

Some of the rapidly ripening tomatoes picked from plants in home gardens last week were found to have soft areas which appeared to be filled with water.

While gardeners have attributed this condition to various causes, such as unequal watering, sun-scald and some mysterious disease, the real culprit was Jack Frost.

Although no evidence of his presence had been noticed in some gardens, there were plenty of sparkling white crystals on plants, lawns, rooftops and parked cars to prove he spent many hours in the Victoria area.

With clear skies and early sun, temperatures rose rapidly, as much as eight to ten degrees Celsius in one hour, and gardeners not around until after daybreak missed some magnificent winter-like scenes.

Forecast overnight temperatures for Greater Victoria ranged from zero C. to 2 above, and actual readings in low-lying areas ranged from minus 2 to plus 2 from Oct. 15 to 22, with soil level readings of minus 3 to minus 5.

When many areas have readings this low, even the apparent frost-free gardens could dip to minus 2 at soil level for half-an-hour over sunrise, and while no frost deposit would be noticed, the tomato fruits not well protected with foliage could be damaged.

Over this particular week of clear days, bright sunshine and cool nights, most plants were dripping moisture by midnight and heavy dew was experienced in all areas. Although the relative humidity was low during daylight hours it increased rapidly as the air cooled after sundown even to the point of causing the fog conditions with which the week ended.

The condensation on the surface of tomato fruits would turn to ice crystals as soon as the air temperature dropped slightly below zero Celsius.

Once the crystals formed, a rise in temperature of several degrees would be needed to turn them back into water and a dwell of 30 to 60 minutes would freeze the cells immediately beneath, causing them to burst. The frozen spot would then appear as a bruise on the surface of an apple and the exploded cell area would be filled with water.

This is the exact condition described by gardeners reporting damaged fruits.

Some gardeners were careful to point out the tomato plants themselves, and other frost-tender plants nearby, showed no sign of frost damage and from this fact deduced their garden had not experienced frost.

Mature plants containing a fair amount of hardened fibre will not be so easily damaged by a few ice crystals as the succulent non-fibrous tomato fruits.

Frost-tender mature plants will stand up to minus 2 degs. C. for short periods without appreciable damage, but the same temperature will ruin the plants if it persists for two or three hours.

Frost dwelling for a long period, or of sufficient intensity to damage tomato plants and dahlias in a short period, would have turned the tomato fruits to balls of mush.

So don't blame watering, sun-scald or some obscure disease for the watery spots on tomato fruits. Remember, it is not often we have ripening tomatoes outdoors in the latter half of October.

SHARKS BLOCK HUNT FOR MONTEZUMA GOLD

VERACRUZ (UPI) — Authorities say sharks have forced Mexican government frogmen to suspend the search for more gold from what reportedly is the legendary treasure of Montezuma.

"A great quantity of sharks, hundreds of other dangerous species, plus high seas, have forced us to suspend the search for the time being," Capt. Ediberto Lopez Pineda told reporters Wednesday.

The skin divers started searching an area of the Gulf of Mexico coast 22 days ago after a fisherman found what experts believe could be the treasure of Montezuma, the dead Aztec emperor.

Lopez Pineda, leader of the search — being carried out under government supervision — said that "visibility even two feet below the surface is virtually nil."

He said his men had found a great quantity of ceramic fragments, a large iron ring, ballast rocks and nails, but no gold.

The only one to find any of the metal is 25-year-old fisherman Raul Hurtodo.

Man Hurt In Crash

A Canadian Forces serviceman is in fair condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital today with multiple injuries he received in a single-car accident about 2 a.m. on the Old Island Highway.

Colwood RCMP said Terrence Leonard Zerr, 28, of 698 Galiano Court, lost control of his vehicle near Four Mile Hill.

A police spokesman said it was raining at the time of the accident. Zerr was alone in the car.

Three Named To Parks Commission

Capital Regional District board members Wednesday approved three new appointments to the Sooke Parks and Recreation Commission.

They include Mrs. Sharon Pednault, of 1655 Whiffen Spit, Mrs. Agnes Williamson, of 2120 Townsend Road, and Gerald Wray, of Sooke.

Mrs. Pednault's term runs to the end of the year while the other two terms expire at the end of 1977.

The three replace Raymond Hull, Leonard James and D. T. McClimon.

More Working For Canadian Companies

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian-controlled companies accounted for 56.9 per cent of all em,plopyees in manufacturing industries, according to a 1972 census of manufacturers, Statistics Canada said Wednesday.

This is up from 55.7 per cent in 1970.

U.S.-controlled companies employed 34.2 per cent of employees in manufacturing during 1972 and other countries accounted for the remaining 8.9 per cent.

The proportion of U.S. control ranged from a high of 45.4 per cent in Ontario to lows of 14.6 per cent in Saskatchewan and 6.8 per cent in Newfoundland.

Foreign - controlled companies produced 51.8 per cent of all goods shipped.

Tokyo Costly

ZURICH (UPI) — Tokyo is the world's most expensive city and Bogota the cheapest, while salaries are highest in Chicago and lowest in Buenos Aires, the Union Bank of Switzerland said Wednesday.

Food costs the most in Tokyo, Stockholm, Geneva and Copenhagen and is cheapest in Bogota, Buenos Aires and Dublin, the survey said.

Manama, the capital of Bahrein, has the world's most expensive clothing, followed, in order, by Paris, Hong Kong, Geneva and Caracas.

The cheapest clothing is in Bogota, London and Singapore, also in that order.

Apartments, meanwhile, cost the most in Ne York and Panama and the least in Manila and Vienna.

The prices in restaurants and hotels are highest in Panama, Paris, Buenos Aires and Geneva and lowest in Bogota, Johannesburg, Madrid and Istanbul.

M-B Warns Gov't On Forest Tenure

VANCOUVER (CP) — J. V. Clyne, former chairman of Macmillan Bloedel Ltd., warned the provincial government Wednesday not to tamper with its forest tenure policy.

Clyne said in a speech at the University of British Columbia that Macmillan Bloedel has spent more than $700 million on expansion in British Columbia during the past 15 years "on the faith of (forest) tenures granted by the government of this province."

"If changes are made which will render the supply of the raw resource materials uncertain, or if costs are added which will decrease the already inadequate profit of the existing companies, I would forecast an unhappy future," said Clyne, "not only for the companies concerned and the people who depend on them, but also for the economy of this province."

He referred to the report of the Pearse commission on forest resources, saying suggestions to the commission that the terms of tree farm licencing should be changed would cause great damage to the industry. The report has not been released.

"It is . . . highly important that no further hindrances be created to prevent the industry recovering from its present economic misfortunes.

Two Years Extra for Walk-Away

A 38-year-old Victoria area man paid for almost one year of unauthorized liberty when he was sentenced Wednesday in Victoria provincial court by Judge William Ostler to two years in prison.

Leonard Robert Larson pleaded guilty to a Saanich charge of being unlawfully at large Oct. 22, 1975, from Lifeline House, 5023 Old West Saanich Road, and also to a four-count Victoria charge containing three counts about credit cards and one of uttering a cheque.

Statements by prosecutor Robert Mulligan and defence lawyer William McElmoyle showed Larson had a record dating back to 1957 and including one 1973 conviction in Victoria for being unlawfully at large and four convictions for robbery — in Vancouver in 1959, 1960 and 1967 and in Coquitlam in 1974, when he was imprisoned for seven years.

Larson was transferred to William Head in 1975 and was placed on day parole Sept. 10 of that year. He went to the Lifeline House for inmates and helped at the Glendale centre for troubled children.

McElmoyle said Larson had been allowed to take some Glendale children to Quebec for several weeks, apparently without escort, and returned them without trouble. But on his return, said the defence lawyer, Larson became involved "with a civilian staff worker" at William Head and "she became pregnant."

Because of the pressure of this and a long-standing alcohol problem, said McElmoyle, Larson left Lifeline Oct. 22, 1975. He said Larson spent six months working as a nursing aide with Vietnam veterans in California and was a Vancouver apartment block manager for more than two months.

Larson returned to Victoria in early October and was arrested Oct. 14 by Victoria police in an apartment on Kingston. The officers who found him "hiding in the kitchen" discovered Larson had credit cards belonging to a former employer.

The cards had been used Oct. 13 to obtain $171.25 in cash and merchandise from two Victoria stores and Larson uttered a $100 cheque Oct. 12 at a third store to obtain a $100 ring later sold at a beer parlor by another man.

Ostler said that "there is much good in this man (but) there is altogether too much" in the way of escapes and at-large incidents in this area. He sentenced Larson to one year for being unlawfully at large and a second year for the other offences, saying they would be added to the uncompleted part of his 1974 terms.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Only a seven-year gap since his last dentention for a narcotics offence saved a 29-year-old Victoria man from going to jail again, Judge William Ostler said Wednesday in Victoria provincial court.

Instead, he ordered a $750 fine for Philip Ralph Isaacson, 108 Pandora, who pleaded guilty to a lesser charge of possession of LSD in Victoria Nov. 17, 1975, and then was found not guilty by Ostler on the original charge of possession of LSD for the purpose of trafficking.

Prosecutor William Southward, who consented to the plea, said 18 capsules were found when a car in which Isaacson was a passenger was stopped by police in the 2800-block Douglas about 7:45 p.m. Nov. 17, 1975.

He said Isaacson's record included seven offences from early 1965 to late 1969 and the last sentence was two years for trafficking in a narcotic in Victoria in August, 1969.

Bail was refused by Ostler for Norman Claude Vandal, 24, of 680 Garbally, who was remanded to today for further hearing on two Victoria charges, both dated last Friday.

The first contains one count of attempting to defraud a Victoria store of a coat and one count of possession of a credit card "known to have been obtained in Canada by the commission of an offence." The second count, enacted into law last spring, carries a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison.

The second charge contains two counts of defrauding Victoria stores of clothing. At the request of defence lawyer Harvey Korman, Ostler issued an order prohibiting publication or broadcast of bail-hearing details.

Separate charges of escaping Oct. 8 from Oakalla jail in Burnaby were on the court calendar for Dennis Matthew Wilson, 23, and Thomas Russell Totten, 26, but were not read formally and were remanded by Ostler for further hearing later, along with a joint Saanich charge.

Wilson and Totten, reported by police to be among six who left the jail, were charged Oct. 13 in Victoria court with possession of housebreaking instruments Oct. 12 in Saanich and possession of a known stolen car at the same time.

John Barrett, 18, of 92 Wellington, and Carl Richard Bamforth, 19, of 1645 Richardson, chose trial by county court judge on a joint Victoria charge of a break-in and theft Saturday at London Fish and Chips, 723 Pandora.

They also pleaded not guilty to a second joint Victoria charge of possession Saturday of known stolen cases of beer. Ostler, who had ordered Monday that both be detained in custody, chose Nov. 22 for a preliminary hearing of the break-in charge and trial of the other.

Duncan area resident Roxie Gail Haslam, 19, pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of stealing $4.74 worth of cosmetics Oct. 13 from the F. W. Woolworth store, 1200 Douglas.

Prosecutor Robert Mulligan said Ms. Haslam had two previous convictions, both earlier this year and one for a similar theft. Ostler warned that she could not expect to avoid jail if she continued such conduct and fined her $250.

Peter George MacLean, 25, of 22 Midwood, chose trial by county court judge on a Victoria charge of possession Oct. 16 of two known stolen coats and had his preliminary hearing set by Ostler for next Tuesday. MacLean was charged Oct. 18, when Ostler ended a bail hearing by ordering detention in custody.

In traffic court, Gordon William Johnson, 53, of 1345 Pembroke, pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of driving Oct. 17 with a blood-alcohol reading above .08 per cent and was sentenced by Judge Blake Allan to an intermittent jail term of 28 days.

They were Wade William Holstein, 30, of Humpback Road, stopped Oct. 16 and fined $500; Raymond David Smith, 59, Port Renfrew, Oct. 15 and $450; George Wilfred Taylor, 56, of 2500 Florence Lake, Oct. 17 and $500; Peter Albert Wiens, 39, of 3172 Pearkes, Aug. 8 and 5$00, and Gerald Alexander Sylvester, 17, of 2609 Sooke, Oct. 10, fined $50 and ordered to do 100 hours of community work.

John Norman Leebetter, 51, of 1746 Pembroke, pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of driving "over .08" and was fined $500.

Juveniles Charged With 18 Offences

Two Victoria boys have been charged in juvenile court with 18 offences in Oak Bay in September and October and will be charged with others shortly, Oak Bay police disclosed Wednesday.

A spokesman said the boys, both aged 14, were apprehended after a three-day investigation of a dozen thefts of bicycles and thefts from cars plus two break-ins at construction sheds and four break-ins with theft from boats at the Oak Bay Marina.

Police said the total value of items taken in the thefts was about $1,500 and half of the items had been recovered.

Rezoning Opposed Coach Ships Out Two

DUNCAN — An angry citizen lashed Duncan council this week for what he considered an excessive amount of spot rezoning for townhouse developments.

Don Voysey, of 391 Prevost Road, was one of a number of residents who voiced their opposition to further rezoning.

Voysey said they didn't know from one week to the next if another "barracks-like" building would be proposed beside their homes.

In response to an alderman's question he said he would prefer to see the whole area rezoned so that a developer could purchase all the properties and produce an over-all plan.

No Appeal on Kitimat Verdict

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia attorney-general's department will not appeal the dismissal last month of a charge of obstruction against Peter Burton, a union leader in the 18-day strike at the Alcan smelter in Kitimat, last June.

The crown has also dropped similar charges against 31 other persons, mostly members of the Canadian Asociation of Smelter and Allied Workers (CASAW), for their actions during the striie.

The crown's decision was contained in a lttter received Wednesday by Leo McGrady, the union's lawyer.

The charges had been stayed by the crown after Kitimat provincial court judge Selwyn Romilly dismissed the charge against Burton last month.

Thirty-two persons were arrested after an RCMP riot squad broke up a union barricade on the road to the smelter June 12.

When the charge against Burton was dismissed, prosecutor Gary Abrams said the crown intended to appeal the verdict.

Locci Slezak, who was fined $350 last month, for obstructing a police officer, has been the only union member convicted of a criminal charge stemming from the strike so far.

Two charges of theft over $250, one charge of common assault, one of destruction of property and one charge of possession of an offensive weapon will be heard in Kitimat on Nov. 18.

Twelve union members, including Burton, still face contempt of court proceedings for defying a B.C. Supreme Court order to end their strike.

These charges were dismissed Sept. 11, but Alcan is appealing the decision to the B.C. court of appeal is set for Monday.

EX-PILOT FACES HEROIN CHARGE

VANCOUVER (CP) — A former Pacific Western Airlines pilot who was committed for trial here Sept. 30, charged with possession of heroin for the purpose of trafficking, has been arrested in Amsterdam and charged with a simular offence.

An RCMP drug officer said Wednesday that Robert Irvine Bell, 51, of Surrey was picked up Monday at the international airport in Amsterdam.

The RCMP said Bell allegedly had 300 grams of heroin strapped to his body valued at between $250,000 and $500,000.

Bell was on $50,000 bail in Vancouver, awaiting high court trial for possession of about six ounces of heroin for the purpose of trafficking.

He was employed by PWA, flying international routes when arrested at his Surrey home, but resigned from the airline after being charged.

A ban on publication of evidence was imposed at the hearing here.

RCMP said Bell will stand trial in Amsterdam, charged with a narcotic offence, and whether he will be extradited to stand trial here would depend on disposition of the case in the Netherlands.

Shooting Armed Man Earns Police Praise

LANGLEY (CP) — A coroner's inquest jury has commended two policemen for shooting a man carrying an unloaded rifle and a knife after he kept advancing towards the two even though he was mortally wounded by three of their bullets.

The jury ruled Wednesday that the July death of Paja (Paul) Nikolic, 51, of Langley, was unnatural and a non-culpable homicide and commended the police for their actions.

The incident began when RCMP Cpl. Art Pruett answered a call to a disturbance at Nikolic's home.

He told the inquest that when he arrived, he saw Nikolic approaching him, pointing a .303-calibre rifle and carrying a hunting knife under his belt.

He said he fired three warning shots and yelled warnings at Nikolic, but the man kept advancing.

Const. Ross Somers then arrived at the scene and took cover behind a wall.

"Drop him, Ross, drop him," Cpl. Pruett said he yelled. He said his field of fire became obscured.

Const. Somers fired his revolver once at Nikolic, but there was no reaction, the constable said, so he fired three more shots. Nikolic didn't even flinch, said the RCMP officer.

Nikolic then attacked Somer's patrol car, drew his knife, staggered and then collapsed. He died 10 hours later.

The officers later discovered the rifle was not loaded.

Testimony showed that Nikolic had a drinking problem.

Barrett Opposed To Oil Pipeline

CRANBROOK (CP) — Opposition Leader Dave Barrett says that if the New Democratic Party returns to power in British Columbia it will demand a 15 per cent tax on the total annual volume of crude oil passing through a proposed pipeline from Kitimat to Edmonton.

The former premier told a meeting Tuesday that B.C. would not benefit if the pipeline went through as proposed.

"If the pipeline goes in, they will bring American crews and workers up to build it," he said. "It will mean a short capital infusion of money, prices will be driven up further in the North, there will be no permanent jobs and then you'll have a bust again in the North."

He said that if the pipeline is built, an NDP government will give every village and unorganized territory on the route the right to assess and tax the line for school and general taxes.

He said a rental surtax would be added on top of the 15 per cent and that an NDP government would then build its own refinery for gasoline.

b.c. briefs

Extradition Quashed

VANCOUVER (CP) — A man wanted in connection with a $4.5 million drug seizure here two years ago was freed by a Hong Kong judge after an extradition hearing.

Chang Man-ching, 33, a Hong Kong citizen, was one of five persons charged with conspiracy to traffic in heroin after police seized six pounds of heroin on Oct. 11, 1974.

The Hong Kong magistrate ruled that there was not enough evidence to extradite Chang Man-ching to Canada.

Crash Ends Chase

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — RCMP laid charges against a 21-year-old Prince George woman Wednesday following a wild car chase Monday night.

Marie Nancy Pierre was charged with escaping lawful custody, criminal negligence in operation of a motor vehicle, theft of over $200, five counts of hit and run, breach of probation and failure to abstain from alcohol.

Police said she drove off in a police cruiser after being taken from a car which was stopped by police on a city street. She then hit a number of parked cars before ramming a truck on Highway 97.

Murder Charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Samuel Adamson, 20, was charged Wednesday with the second-degree murder Tuesday of Steve Miller, 49, who was found stabbed at least 20 times in his skid road hotel room. It was the 19th slaying in the city this year.

RCMP Beefed Up

KELOWNA (CP) — Kelowna's auxiliary RCMP force will be increased to 43 members from 28 to deal with an increase in vandalism and breaking and entering, police officials said Wednesday. The additions will include five women.

Decision Reserved On Needle

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial Court Judge J. D. Layton reserved decision Wednesday in the case of acupuncturist Grant Smith, 33, who is charged with unlawfully practising medicine earlier this year while not registered under the British Columbia Medical Act.

Maurcie George Lowe, an investigator with the B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons, produced newspaper advertisements in which the accused offered acupuncture treatments for a variety of physical and nervous disorders.

The college was the organization which brought the case to court.

Richard Gibbons, counsel for Smith, argued that provisions of the Medical Act limiting the practices of medicine to registered physicians and surgeons do not necessarily extend to acupuncture any more than they do to health spas or yoga schools.

Eight in Vancouver Seek Mayor's Post

VANCOUVER (CP) — Eight candidates for mayor have filed nomination papers for the Nov. 17 civic elections.

Nominations closed at noon Wednesday and all the major civic parties filed full slates — the Civic Non-Partisan Association (NPA), the Committee of Progressive Electors (COPE) and The Electors' Action Movement (TEAM).

A number of minor parties are also running candidates, but not full slates — the (LSA), the North American Labor Party (NALP), the Pure Food Guild Inc., and the Society for Change.

The mayoral candidates include three incumbent aldermen — Helen Boyce, independent, a businesswoman; Ed Sweeney, NPA, a management consultant, and Jack Volrich, TEAM, a lawyer.

Others running for mayor are Joseph Kellnehfn, LSA, a postal clerk; Alan Levinson, NALP, organizer; Robert Mackaroff, independent, a physician, and Bruce Yorke, COPE, an economist, and Jim Land, a recycling activist.

Total number of candidates is 117 for 27 civic offices.

Future of U.S. N-Power To Be Decided by Ballot

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although overshadowed by presidential and congressional elections, the Nov. 2 balloting will also determine the future of nuclear power in six states.

The nuclear power industry beat back an anti-nuclear initiative in a California referendum last June, only to see six more spring up on the ballots of Arizona, Colorado, Washington, Oregon, Montana and Ohio.

The passage of any one of them on Nov. 2 would be a grave setback to the nuclear industry.

All six ballot proposals are essentially similar, requiring guarantees of safety and full accident-compensation, affirmed by both houses of a state's legislature, before that state can permit a nuclear power plant or related facility.

Environment groups and other supporters say such guarantees are justified by the alleged hazards of nuclear power.

The nuclear and electric utility industries say the proposed guarantees are so tough they would actually ban further nuclear power in any state adopting them, leading to electricity shortages.

In Ohio alone, utility-backed foes of the anti-nuclear initiative have a $1 million budget, 25 times the budget of its supporters, a coalition of seven consumer groups.

The pattern appears similar in the other states, but the ballot proposals seem to stand a better chance of passage, here and there, than the dollar-power alone might indicate.

In Washington, public opinion polls have indicated a strong chance of passing the anti-nuclear measure; observers in Oregon believe the measure has an even chance or better, while polls indicate a close vote.

In Montana, without benefit of opinion polls, both sides were predicting a close contest.

In Colorado, a poll published earlier this month by the Denver Post showed that 55 per cent of those polled appeared to favor the anti-nuclear measure, 25 per cent were against and 20 per cent were undecided.

In Ohio, both sides claimed favorable polls but the measure is opposed by a broad range of interest groups.

An independent poll in Arizona recently pointed to failure of the initiative in November.

All six ballot initiatives would require that nuclear facilities be proven safe by prior equipment testing before they may be built or operated within the state.

All six would also require proof that nuclear materials will be safely stored and handled, before facilities can be authorized.

All six would require that the nuclear power industry assume responsibility for "full compensation" of all damages resulting from a nuclear accident.

Five of them include a ban on nuclear facilities until and unless Congress repeals the so-called Price-Anderson Act, which provided liability insurance for commercial nuclear powerplants, but only up to a limit of some $560 million; these states would insist on unlimited liability.

Ford Cuts Spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Ford administration said Wednesday it underspent its budget by $7.6 billion in the last three months, again raising questions of whether the administration has contributed to the recent economic slowdown.

The total shortfall in government spending was 1.4 billion for the nine-month period ending in September.

Although at first glance a reduction in government spending may seem like good news, it can hurt the private economy because it means the government is buying less than it said it would. This may mean lower output, profits and employment throughout the economy.

Since the slowdown in spending and economic growth have occurred simultaneously, many economists say they are connnected, although top administration officials deny this.

A major share of the underspending in the past nine months occurred in the defence department, which spent $3.6 billion less than it was authorized to spend. The remainder of the spending shortfall was distributed throughout government agencies.

Administration budget agency officials still were unable to say why the spending slowdown was so widespread. They said previously they were surprised and concerned about it because it was not anticipated.

Treasury Secretary William E. Simon and budget director James T. Lynn said in a joint statement they are not sure whether the slowdown in spending will continue next year.

Carter, Ford Neck-and-Neck

Times News Services

President Gerald Ford claims the momentum for an upset victory is going his way in this final week of the presidential campaign. Jimmy Carter, trying to stay ahead in what he concedes is a close race, has started talking of cutting taxes.

Two of the nation's leading pollsters, George Gallup and Louis Harris, agreed with the candidates that the race is close. They said at the National Press Club in Washington Wednesday the election could go either way.

Gallup, who has been doing surveys since 1935, said he had never seen "a greater shift of opinion" than in the current race. The debates stirred new interest, Gallup said, and most movement seems to be going for Ford.

"If Jimmy Carter loses this election, and I for one would not rule out that possibility," Harris said, "He will have booted by far the biggest lead in modern political history."

Both the Harris and the Gallup polls had Carter way ahead early in the campaign. The latest Gallup poll has Carter only six percentage points ahead and the latest Harris survey has Carter only three to four points in front.

Ford, who campaigns today in Ohio, boasted of big crowds that welcomed him this week. Recalling the 1948 election, Ford said "It kind of reminds me of the momentum Harry Truman created in the final days of his campaign."

Carter — who campaigns today in Pittsburgh and Erie, Pa.; Cleveland, Ohio, and a late-added appearence in Brookly, N.Y. — told an airport rally in Pittsburgh he is counting on a big turnout.

Meanwhile, New York's highest court has knocked independent Eugene McCarthy off Tuesday's presidential ballot, strengthening Carter's drive for the state's 41 electoral votes.

McCarthy said the decision was unconstitutional and said he will take the issue to the federal courts.

The former Minnesota senator, who unsuccessfully sought the Democratic presidential nomination in 1968, was opposed by the state Democratic organization.

U.S. Gets Access To Korean Files?

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. justice department has withdrawn the extraordinary U.S. grand jury subpoena for the banking records of the South Korean embassy and its diplomatic delegation here, according to ources in the U.S. government and the embassy.

One justice department source said the South Korean embassy has voluntarily allowed access to subpoenaed Riggs National Bank records. However, a source within the embassy said he knew of no agreement to provide documents to federal investigators.

The subpoena had been issued in an attempt by investigators to trace how large amounts of cash may have been generated by South Korean agents for cash payments, gifts and campaign contributions to U.S. congressmen to influence congressional action concerning South Korea.

The subpoena would have required Riggs National Bank to produce for the government investigators the banking records of the South Korean embassy and its personnel.

Super-Agency Proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A congressional study today recommended creation of a new super-agency for consumers, regulating everything from prescription drugs to seat belts.

The proposal was contained in the final part of a massive report on regulatory reform released by Rep. John E. Moss (Dem.-Calif.) and his oversight subcommittee.

"The conclusions reject the notion that the agencies themselves, as presently constituted, can be counted on to represent the broad interest of the general public, particularly consumers," Moss said.

"Time and time again, our study discloses major decisions in which the agencies simply ignored the consumer's position."

Sky Search Satellites Eyed by Russia, U.S.

WASHINGTON (WP) — The United States and the Soviet Union have discussed the possibility of setting up networks of orbiting satellites to search for stranded ships and downed aircraft and to measure worldwide air pollution.

These two possibilites emerged as strong candidates for the next joint Soviet-American space missions after talks last week between space scentists of both countries at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration headquarters and the Smithsonian Air and Space Museum in Washington.

The talks were exploratory, with neigher side commiting resources to any specific joint mission propoal. The talks were held at Soviet request, to coincide with a trip to California by Inercosmos chairman Boris Petrov to attend the annual meeting of the International Astronautics Federation.

"We wanted to identify what kinds of scientific endeavors we might attempt together in the next decade," said Dr. Alan M. Lovelace, NASA deputy administrator who headed the U.S. delegation to the talks. "We exchanged ideas on what would be feasible and agreed to study a few in depth."

One global satellite system the two countries will study is a network to pinpoint the locations of crashed airliners and ships in distress anywhere in the world.

LIFTED PLANE SINKS AGAIN

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. Navy's sunken F-14 fighter plane fell back to the bottom of the North Sea on Wednesday as bad weather ruined a bid to raise it, the navy reported.

The navy also said a search team is still looking for the plane's secret Phoenix missle on the bed of the North Sea off Scotland.

"A lift line which had been secured to the F-14 Tuesday failed in high seas and the aircraft sank to the bottom," a navy spokesman said.

Better Health Not Mainly Due to Doctors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Modern medicine, with its antiseptics, antibiotics and vaccines, may be taking too much credit for mankind's declining death rate in the last three centuries, says a British scholar.

Dr. Thomas McKeown said Wednesday that better nutrition appears to have started a mortality turn-around at the end of the 17th century. Improved hygiene and decreased infection exposure in the second half of the 19th century continued the downward death trend, he said, and contributed more to improved human survival at the time than did formal medicine.

Dr. McKeown, pro-vice-chancellor and professor of social medicine at the University of Birmingham, said modern medical science is a relative late-comer affecting declining mortality. But medicine's later success has distorted its true role in good health care, he said.

"I'm not trying to diminish the contribution of medicine, but I'm saying we need a new way of thinking about it in relation to health," Dr. McKeown told the annual meeting of the National Academy of Sciences' Institute of Medicine.

"Active medicine today is focused on remedial medicine, but not on changing the conditions that cause disease in the first place," he added in an interview.

"Many medical texts look at disease research as identifying the cause of the problem and finding a way to intervene in the process after it's started. The picture that man is ill and must be made well is, in my opinion, off the mark. My view is that he was well and was made ill."

Dr. McKeown said environmental, nutritional and behavioral influences affect modern health as much or more than does medical science. Improvement of these factors began the trend away from high mortality, but they have lost importance in the minds of many medical people concentrating too much upon "remedial medicine," he said.

VITAMIN C NO COLD CURE

BOSTON (AP) — Researchers who said two years ago Vitamin C might relieve the common cold now conclude the drug does not significantly ease symptoms of the sniffles.

"We do not believe that Vitamin C has widespread usefulness as a cold remedy," the team of doctors concluded.

The new study was directed by Dr. John Coulehan at the University of Pittsburgh medical school and was reported in the New England Journal of Medicine.

The virtues of Vitamin C have been debated since Nobel laureate Linus Pauling said in 1970 people who took large daily doses of the drug would have fewer colds. He also said the colds they did get would be less severe.

To test that theory, Coulehan and his associates experimented with students at a Navajo boarding school, Arizona. They concluded in 1974 that students who took Vitamin C had milder colds.

"Our study got a lot of publicity and was used to argue that Vitamin C was beneficial," Coulehan said in an interview. "Because of this, we went into a second study that was longer and more controlled."

The second time, the doctors watched the health of 868 Navajo children, half of whom took Vitamin C. The rest got fake pills. Over five months, the number and length of colds were almost identical between the two groups, the doctors said.

"Our important finding was negative," Coulehan said. "We were unable to demonstrate significant benefits of Vitamin C."

Coulehan said scientists theorize that in some cases the vitamin has an effect on the body similar to an antihistamine, but this is not enough reason to take large quantities of the drug.

"I don't think there is any evidence to recommend Vitamin C in large doses when a person has a cold. There are other antihistamines available."

Mars' Ice Age Seen Permanent

By THOMAS O'TOOLE
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The ice age now gripping Mars may be 500 million years old and may continue for another 500 million years, suggesting that the red planet never will be a place people from Earth would want to colonize.

This is the cautious but growing opinion of a number of scientists who designed some of the instruments on the two Viking spacecraft orbiting Mars and the two Vikings on the surface of Mars. Their opinions run contrary to those of Viking geologists, who believe Mars undergoes periodic ice ages every 40,000 or 50,000 years, the way Earth does.

"I have a strong conviction that Mars was flooded only after the big volcanoes erupted," Dr. C. Barney Farmer of Pasadena's jet propulsion laboratory, which is monitoring the Viking mission, said in a recent interview. "That's the only way I can see enough heat being released to melt large enough quantities of ice to produce the floods."

There is little doubt that huge floods engulfed Mars in the past, but Farmer disputes the idea that the floods are episodic or took place at any time in the last 50,000 years. Farmer says the floods came with the volcanoes and ended when the volcanoes petered out, producing the ice age that Viking sees everywhere it "looks" on Mars.

Still a mystery is when the biggest volcanoes went through their most violent eruptions on Mars. Some Viking geologists believe this period took place as recently as 200 million years ago, but other Viking scientists now think it was as long as 500 million years or even one billion years ago.

There are at least 12 big Martian volcanoes visible in the Viking pictures taken from orbit, and four are big enough to affect the makeup of the planet. Farmer believes the floods began when these four volcanoes began to erupt and build up their lava flows into the biggest mountain seen anywhere in the solar system.

The floods came when the heat from the volcanoes melted the subsurface permafrost on Mars. Rivers burst through cracks near the tops of the volcanoes, which by that time were so high (Mt. Olympus on Mars is three times higher than Earth's 29,028-foot Mt. Everest) that the water had nowhere to go but downhill.

Farmer says so much water flowed down the slopes of the biggest volcanoes that it formed large lakes and small oceans in the deepest basins on Mars. The Chryse Basin, where the first Viking spacecraft landed, has been found in recent measurements to be shaped like a dried-out ocean basin, with some of its sides rising to a height of three miles.

How long were the big volcanoes hot enough to prolong the deluge? None of the Viking scientists knows the answer to that, but a recent closeup photograph of one of the three volcanoes on the 1,000-mile long Tharsis Ridge shows four distinct burned-out craters at its crest. This suggests four eruptive periods, each of which would have lasted 1,000 years.

This would have been long enough, Farmer insists, for the floods to carve out the hundreds of riverbeds witnessed in the Viking photograps and to widen and lengthen the canyons that criss-cross the Martian surface east and southeast of the volcanoes.

Why did the floods stop? Farmer says because the volcanoes stopped erupting or because their lava formed such massive mountains that they prevented the eruptions from breaking through the surface.

JAMAICA PM GIVEN A SILENT WELCOME

OTTAWA (AP) — Prime Minister Michael Manley of Jamaica arrived here to start a three-day Canadian visit and received all the traditional welcomes except the 19-gun salute due visiting heads of government.

Manley and his wife arrived Wednesday in a slight snow flurry and near-freezing temperatures

They were greeted by Prime Minister and Mrs. Trudeau, and Manley inspected the guard of honor. But there was no booming gun salute in the background as there should have been.

Armed forces officials said later that the saluting gun had somehow not made it across town from the Rockcliff armed forces base to the airport in time to greet the prime minister.

Payless Day For Italians

ROME (AP) — For many Italian workers Wednesday was monthly pay day as usual, but for others sagging municipal and company treasuries meant that it was payless day or part-pay day.

Some pay envelopes were empty and others half full while some workers who received full salaries this time faced the prospect of joining the ranks of the new unpaid breed next time around.

Three thousand workers of a government-controlled chemical group in Dardinia were told that the firm's treasury lacks funds for October wages. They poured into the factory and threatened trouble.

The big state-owned textile firm, Montefibre, earlier had announced that it could pay only 40 per cent the wages of its 18,000 workers. This provoked such a sharp outburst from the labor unions that company officials made a round of banks and creditors scraping up money to reduce the number of the payless.

By their own accounts, the cities of Genoa, Venice, Naples and Palermo are putting money in the envelopes of their municipal workers perhaps for the last month.

Genoa, Italy's largest port city, and Venice declared their treasuries empty for wages as well as essential city services, such as sanitation.

Most Italian cities operate in the red—Rome's debt is put at more than $5 billion. The central government usually bails them out through the state-controlled bank or through last-minute decrees.

Now the feeling is spreading that deficit-ridden state firms and municipalities may fall victim to austerity measures planned by the weak government of Christian Democrat Premier Giulio Andreotti, which is able to survive only because of the benevolent "no-opposition" stance of the powerful Communist party.

Andreotti's government has already slapped increases ranging from 25 per cent on telephones and gasoline to 15 per cent on electricity. High-test gasoline now costs the equivalent of $2.15 a gallon.

The government seems bent on reducing the automatic cost-of-living allowance that had been adjusted to the current inflation rate of 17 per cent.

The austerity measures have led to widespread labor discontent and strikes, including some violence, and "economic raids" on supermarkets by leftist extremists protesting prices of more than $3 for a pound of steak and $4 a pound for parmesan cheese, a staple.

Embassy Bomb Injures Six

MADRID (UPI) — Police checked travellers at airports and on highways today in the search for terrorists who staged a mystery bombing and sub-machine-gun attack against the Moroccan embassy in Madrid.

The attack Wednesday injured six persons, one of them critically, and wrecked most of the embassy's ground-floor offices.

A police statement said the attack was carried out by two men. It said one of them smashed a window with a small bomb and the other threw a packet containing two lbs. of dynamite through the hole.

Police said one of the attackers may have been injured and they would look for injured person when checking travellers.

Neither embassy officials nor Spanish police appeared to have any clue to the identity or motives of the assailants.

Riot police in Madrid also clashed with 1,000 striking bus workers today firing rubber bullets and smoke flares in a street clash that injured about a dozen persons, some of them seriously.

The governor of Madrid province said the injured included six police and five strikers, one of whom lost an eye when hit by a bullet.

The violence followed incidents earlier in the morning when police cleared two bus depots of striking workers.

The walkout by Madrid's 8,000 bus drivers and conductors — demanding pay raises and labor union freedom — resulted in an estimated one million persons arriving late to work.

Western Region Control Sought

The Capital Regional District board will be asked to approve a recommendation greatly increasing its control over development in the western communities.

Board chairman Jim Campbell said Wednesday the planning and zoning committee is drafting a resolution which would see Langford, Metchosin and Colwood designated as a development area.

He said he hopes the resolution will be placed before directors at the next general board meeting in two weeks time. If approved it would then go to the provincial cabinet for approval.

By having the area designated a development area, Campbell said, the regional district would have the option of either applying the zoning bylaw to any development scheme or requesting the developer to take out a land use contract.

Under the present arrangement, developers may proceed with any project provided it conforms to existing zoning requirements.

If the developer seeks a variance he still has to apply for a land use contract which needs cabinet assent and generally involves a wait of anywhere up to three months.

"If the area becomes a development area, there would be no wait," said Campbell. "It would be simpler, easier and more efficient."

He stressed designation will not mean rampant development.

"We are not interested in creating development as such," he said, "only in controlling it."

He denied the move is aimed at any particular developer.

If the move is made, it will not be the first time an entire area has been designated. Several years ago the former Socred government designated the Gulf Islands a development area.

There was an uproar at the time because, Campbell noted, xany people erroneously concluded the government had sold out to the developers.

"It's really a semantic problem," said Campbell. "The word development gives the wrong connotation. It should be called a planning control area."

LARGEST GALAXY SEEN

BONN (UPI) — Astronomers at the Effelsberg radio telescope station believe they have discovered the largest known galaxy in space.

Pauliny Toth of the Max-Planck Institute for Radio Astronomy said Wednesday a group of scientists at the station measured the galaxy by red shift about two months ago and decided it was the biggest and most distant known.

He said it was 1,370 million light years away from earth and emitting stronger radio pulses than any other galaxy.

Red shift measures the velocity of an object in space and the velocity then is translated into distance.

Toth said the galaxy was discovered by radio telescope one year ago and its central cluster of stars later was sighted optically.

Barry Mador of the Cambridge Institute of Astronomy said the galaxy is about one third larger than any other known.

"This is the biggest and most active galaxy of its kind and as such is interesting to analyze," Mador said.

Mao's Widow To Live

PEKING (AFP) — A Chinese official said today that the "gang of four" including Mao Tse-tung's widow, Chiang Ching, would not be executed, but he added that they would not be politically "re-educated."

The assistant editor-in-chief of The People's Daily, An Kang, 58, and a member of the Chinese Communist party for 40 years, said the "gang of four" were "sworn-enemies of the people" and "unforgivable."

This was the first official discussion recorded by the foreign press on the events in Peking since the arrests on Oct. 7 of four top radical Chinese leaders accused of trying to usurp power in the party and the state.

The four accused of plotting were Mao's widow and her three accomplices, all Politiburo members — party vice-chairman Wang Hung-wen, Chang Chun-chiao and Yao Wen-yuan.

During a visit to the offices of the official party organ by a delegation of French journalists, An Kang affirmed that Mao's principle of "cure the sickness to save the patient," which means re-education of those accused of crimes, could not apply to the four.

"This principle applies only to the people," he said.

Asked what fate had been determined for them, An Kang said the "gang of four can no longer be tolerated by the revolutionary cadres, workers and peasants. They can no longer live under the same skies as the people."

But this did not mean they will be executed, An Kang said. "They will live as long as they want, until they die a natural death."

Asked about accusations that Chiang Ching and her associates had "dealings abroad." An Kang said articles will be published in the official press containing some revelations.

Ailing Kosygin Sidelined

MOSCOW (UPI) — For the first time in a decade, Prime Minister Alexei Kosygin was in the wings instead of the spotlight when the Soviet Union unfolded its plans for the nation's long-term economic development.

Twice before — in 1966 and 1971 — it was the sad-faced premier and Kremlin economic overlord who went before the Soviet parliament to present production targets worked out for the state-run national economy for the following five years.

But when the latest five-year plan, covering 1976-80, was put up for rubber-stamp legislative approval, Wednesday, Kosygin just sat on the sidelines and watched. The presentation task fell to vice-premier Nikolai Baibokov.

Diplomats suggester that Kosygin's failure to follow precedent by delivering the major economic address might indicate the ailing leader will scale down and possibly relinquish some of his duties in the future. His retirement, they said, could be near.

Soviet officials have admitted that the 72-year-old Kosygin fell ill last summer. But they never have confirmed a London newspaper report that he nearly drowned in a river near Moscow after suffering a stroke or heart attack.

Whatever the ailment, he disappeared from the public eye for almost three months and only recently returned to work — on a limited basis, according to the diplomats.

The Soviet Union's annual budget for 1977, disclosed Wednesday, forecasts a considerable boost in the output of consumer goods compared with this year, reflecting the much improved agricultural situation in the country.

After the dramatic harvest failure of 1975, the Soviet leadership set growth rates for this year that were the smallest since the Second World War — particularly cutting back on livestock herds and other food products. But with officials now jubilantly reporting that the current harvest may set a record, some relation appears possible.

Gov't Faces $11.3M Loss In Swan Valley Food Firm

Economic Development Minister Don Phillips says the provincial government faces the loss of its $11.3 million investment in Swan Valley Foods Ltd. and has made a reorganization proposal to shareholders.

"Swan Valley Foods Ltd. is now insolvent and there are not sufficient assets to pay the present creditors, much less to permit the company to operate," Phillips said in a letter to shareholders Monday.

He said technically, all shareholder loans and preferred and common shares are without value.

The company was set up by the former New Democratic Party government to create jobs.

Phillips said the government's proposal consists of incorporating a new company to be owned pro rata by all original common shareholders (Creston Valley farmers), preferred shareholders and those who have made shareholders' loans, with the exception of the government, which, he said, is prepared to waive its right of participation.

Under the proposal, private shareholders would acquire the complete agricultural operation of the company's uncompleted facility in Creston.

In return, the government would receive all shares of Swan Valley.

Phillips said the assets of the Creston operation consist of farmland, agricultural machinery and irrigation equipment with a book value of $1.23 million.

"The purpose of this offer is to separate the agricultural operations of Swan Valley Foods from the food processing operations to protect the position and enhance the opportunities of the farmers who are minority shareholders," said a press release accompanying the letter to shareholders.

Subject to acceptance of the offer, the government is negotiating the sale of the company's other assets, including an operating processing plant in Richmond and the unfinished potato plant in Creston.

The news release said the government has determined that the previous NDP government had committed the government to $11.3 million in loans and guarantees to Swan Valley.

This consisted of a $7.5 million loan guaranteed by Canada Permanent Trust Co. and direct loans of $2 million in 1975 and a further $1.8 in 1976.

Phillips said losses since the company began operation are $2.6 million. Loans from shareholders, other than the government, amount to $250,000.

The minister said a buyer must have the ability to operate in Canada and internationally and must provide "several millions of dollars" to complete the Creston plant and pay other costs.

CRICKET TOO REACTIONARY

COLOMBO (UPI) — Cricket, one of the most popular sports in Sri Lanka, has been described by an influential newspaper as "reactionary" and may be on its way out of the country.

The English-language Times newspaper, controlled by Prime Minister Sirimaye Bandaranaike's son, Anura Bandaranaike, Tuesday said the government is carrying out a campaign to ban cricket playing because "it is a reactionary game left behind by the British colonialists."

Ottawa Transfers Hit

OTTAWA — The federal government is misleading public service employees by not announcing its intention to move some 20,000 jobs out of Ottawa within the next five or six years, Public Service Alliance of Canada president Andy Stewart said today.

Young people are being lured to Ottawa from across Canada thinking they will have a future here. Many of them buy a house assuming heavy financial commitments because they believe they will be spending the next 30 years here," he said in a statement.

Yet without so much as blinking an eyelash, the government is planning wholesale relocation of government departments."

The alliance president was responding to the announcement today in Charlottetown by Veteran Affairs Minister Daniel MacDonald, that all but a core group of employees and the Veterans Land Administration group will be transferred to Charlottetown by 1980-81. The majority of employees are PSAC members.

"I want to make it very clear that we are not criticizing the effort to bring the federal government and its services closer to the people, nor the effort to help Canada's economicalyl depressed areas," Stewart said.

"However it's about time it published these plans so that people affected can plan accordingly.

Banker's Wife Nabbed For $5,000

MONTREAL (CP) — Three gunmen escaped with about $5,000 after kidnapping a bank manager's wife at her home in nearby Laval on Wednesday, police said.

The masked men burst into the home of R. F. Vos, manager of a Toronto-Dominion Bank branch in nearby Brossard, and tied up his wife who was alone at the time. Police said she was then taken to an unspecified spot.

Vos, whose two school-age children had already left the house, was called at the bank and told to take the contents of the vault to a nearby subway station. But police said he took only about $5,000.

"The money was left in a briefcase there," police said. "We are looking for the suspects."

Mrs. Vos was released unharmed later in the day in a house under construction in Repentigny, a community east of here.

BOY COMPACTED

DELTA (CP) — A 12-year-old Surrey boy nearly got packed away with the garbage Wednesday after he ran away from home.

Delta police said the boy ran away from home Tuesday because of trouble at school. He found a bed for the night in a large garbage bin at the shopping mall.

The next morning, unaware the boy was inside, the diver of a Haul-Away Disposal Ltd. truck hooked on to the bin and dumped it aboard his truck.

The boy and garbage were then run through a complete cycle of the compacting machinery. It wasn't until the driver started to drive away that he heard screaming from the back of the truck.

The boy was pulled out unhurt and turned over to his mother at home. The only loss was one shoe in the compactor.

Black Demands Delay Geneva Talks Start

Times News Services

GENEVA — Balck nationalists forced a two hour delay in the opening of the Rhodesia conference today with demands for concessions from white Prime Minister Ian Smith.

The demands which caused the postponement came from nationalist leaders Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo, conference officials revealed.

They said the two men insisted on receiving a reply from Smith to earlier demands for the release of all political detainees in Rhodesia.

Smith had sent a reply to Richard Wednesday night but it apparently had not been relayed to the Africans, the officials said.

Smith, in his response indicated he would consider the release of some prisoners but that all acts of terrorism would first have to cease.

Earlier Richard told newsmen the major problem facing the parley was the "enormous depth of suspicion between the two sides. One sees it, one can almost feel it in the air around this building and this town."

Richard also said that the talks on establishing black majority rule could go on for five or six weeks.

"You are asking me questions that are five or six weeks down the road if this conference is going to be successful," he told reporters.

Meanwhile, in Salisbury, security officials announced that 11 persons have died in clashes, abduction and sexual violence in the last three days of escalating warfare.

Security forces headquarters Wednesday said its forces killed two black guerrillas in clashes and a black man who apparently violated a government curfew.

It said guerrillas killed seven persons — all apparently blacks — including a government official and a policeman shot to death after being forced at gunpoint to have sexual relations with two young women.

The eleventh casualty, they said, was a black man who hanged himself in jail "after confessing to have aided terrorists."

Black nationalists have vowed to further intensify the violence, particularly if the Geneva conference falters.

HANGING HOUSE BUILT IN BRIDGE

HOUSTON (CP)—Officials are baffled as to how to makeshift house, complete with a toilet and lighting system, came to be built 45 feet above the swirling Bulkley River amid the supporting framework of a highway bridge just outside this northwest B.C. community.

John Turford of Burns Lake, a highways department foreman, said in an interview that the wood frame structure was well constructed with insulated walls.

"I wouldn't call it a house, but it was a very liveable thing."

He said the RCMP told him Wednesday the structure was the work of several juveniles, but police remain stumped as to how it was built and how those responsible for it gained access. "If this was kids, then, as far as I'm concerned, they got an awful lot of courage," Mr. Turford said.

He said when highways crews first spotted the structure abut a week ago, they tried to gain access to it by going over the bridge railing and swinging into it with the help of safety lines, but "it was too damn risky."

Access was finally gained by using a 50-foot fire-truck ladder.

Cruise Ship For City?

The Nanaimo company that bought the cruise ship Prince George from the provincial government earlier this year is now investigating whether or not she can be used as a hotel-motel-restaurant in Victoria's Inner Harbor.

The company's original intention was to use the Prince George as a restaurant and convention centre in the Nanaimo Harbor but a suitable site is apparently not available.

Victoria deputy fire chief Carl Coates said he has been approached by a Yarrows shipyard official who wanted to know what conversion requirements would be needed to make the Prince George meet fire marshal requirements for a hotel-motel-restaurant facility.

Victoria Mayor Mike Young said the Reid Centre frontage is now under the authority of the provincial government and administered through the Capital Improvement District Commission. Any decision on granting docking facilities would have to be made by the provincial government, in cooperation with the city.

He doubted, however, if sufficient wharfage aould be available.

Guards Favor Strike

MONTREAL (CP) — The 7,000 employees of the Canadian Penitentiary Service have given their union, the Public Service Alliance of Canada, a strike mandate to back 12 demands made earlier this month.

The employees, who include guards, clerks and secretaries, voted 77 per cent in favor of the strike mandate to back the demands made Oct. 3 at a meeting between the 47 regional union presidents and penitentiary commissioner Andre Therrien.

The vote was taken in secret last week and Mr. Therrien has notified the union he will make a decision this week on the demands which include:

—That all prisoners considered to be troublemakers be placed in special institutions away from the rest of the prison population.

—That a full delegation of authority be given to institutional directors and that they be responsible to the commissioner.

—That guards not be forced to work overtime.

—That prisoners wear identification numbers on the front and back of their uniforms to make it easy for guards to identify those involved in disturbances.

—That no prisoner be permitted to make any statements to the media unless approved by prison officials.

THREINEN

DORCHESTER, N.B. (CP) — Officials at the maximum-security penitentiary resumed negotiations today with four prisoners holding two hostages. Talks had broken off for the night several hours earlier.

The other is prison guard John Gabriel, 25, who was taking the prisoners to a recreation area Wednesday afternoon when he was abducted by three prisoners wielding a kitchen utensil, thought to be a knife.

The two hostages are reported to be shackled but in good condition.

Epp said there have been the "standard threats" against them, such as removal of fingers, if authorites do not co-operate.

Officials refused a demand for keys to five other cells in the segregation block, but agreed to demands for better recreation facilities, an investigation into medical facilities, an inquiry into the concept of segregating prisoners from other criminals, and the transfer of participants in the hostage-taking to other institutions.

Officials also rejected a demand that the participants not be segregated when they are transferred, Epp said.

John Steeves, a CBC reporter from Moncton who was requested by the prisoners to join the negotiations, said today the prisoners do not trust officials and want ironclad guarantees their demands will be met.

The prisoners also asked for the tranquillizer Seconal but prison officials gave them Valium.

The 101-year-old prison near the New Brunswick-Nova Scotia border has a section where sex offenders such as Threinen and other unpopular prisoners are kept for their own protection.

Police Almost Walked Off

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Late pay cheques and a one-day pay deduction for 21 Victoria policemen who booked off sick last Thursday in a stalled-contract protest sparked threats of another walkout this morning.

But later police union president Sgt. Patrick Braiden said at least the first problem had been resolved.

"The cheques arrived by 10 a.m., otherwise we wouldn't still be here," he said.

Braiden said the problem arose because Mayor Mike Young, chairman of the Victoria police board, appeared to have "reconsidered his position" since an agreement reached last Friday.

The result was the decision —he didn't know whether it was Young's or the police board's — to dock a day's pay for the officers concerned, and this in turn caused delays in the preparation of the cheques.

But the mayor himself expressed surprise at the union's attitude, saying Braiden was informed by letter early in the week that the deductions would be made.

You said he stated in the letter that the officers who were "quote, sick, unquote" would not be paid for that day. This was not a matter of disciplinary action or retaliation, however.

He also pointed out to the union that if it disagrees, the appropriate action would be to file a grievance.

STOVE BLASTS BOAT

VANCOUVER (CP) — A stove burning in the cabin apparently touched off an explosion and fire Wednesday which destroyed a 35-foot fishboat in Coal Harbor.

Ron Robison, attendant at the gas barge where the accident began, said he had just pumped 80 gallons of gasoline into the boat and was starting to pump in stove oil when the explosion occurred.

He said the owner scrambled off the bow of the boat when the cabin exploded and the two men threw off the mooring lines and the boat drifted away from the barge.

"Then he informed me his stove was gbing through all this (refuelling)," said Robison.

He added that the owner mentioned it was his second boat which had exploded.

The boat ran aground at Stanley Park where land-based fire crews waded into the water and doused the flames. The city fire boat was unable to operate because the water was too shallow.

Hydro Sees Less Demand

VANCOUVER (AP) — Hugh Goldie, a planner for B.C. Hydro, says growth of electricity demands in the province during the next 10 years won't be as high as previously predicted.

Goldie, Hydro's system engineering division manager, said Wednesday in an interview that because of this decline and because necessary studies cannot be completed in time, the Peace River Site dam project and the McGregor River diversion probably can be delayed.

He also said that whether Hydro's plans include thermal or hydro-produced power, inflation has increased the cost by 20 to 25 per cent above May, 1975, estimates.

Goldie said he wanted to make it clear that he was discussing power developments that may follow Hydro's currently proposed Revelstoke Dam on the Columbia River.

He made the statements while discussing the extensive review Hydro has prepared for consideration by its directors. Details of the review have not been made public and no decision on the report has been made.

PREVUE PUZZLE PAYOFF DOUBLES

To the more than 2,400 Victoria daily newspaper readers who entered the Prevue Payoff Puzzle contest last week:

That's right. There was no correct solution to the puzzle received by the judges and this week's Payoff Puzzle prize goes up to $100.

The Prevue section in Friday's Times will give puzzle fans the correct solution to last week's puzzle, along with the reasons for choosing one word over another in filling in the crossword blanks — and another chance at the prize money with a new puzzle and official entry blank.

A word of caution to all entrants: please read the rules carefully so that your entry will qualify. Most important, if you do not follow the instructions to write the answer to one of the clues, as designated in the entry form, on the outside of your envelope, your entry will not be considered. And no entries received after the specified deadline will be considered.

If you study the answers to last week's puzzle carefully, you'll find that winning this prize is not a matter of luck. Finding the correct solution to the clues where more than one answer seems to apply requires careful definition of the word and its most logical use.

That's why the Prevue Payoff Puzzle would be fun for crossword fans even if there wasn't a cash prize to be won.

Times News Services

Britain's pound fell to a new low today while leaders of the ruling Labor party squabbled publicly over economic policy.

Sterling had opened at $1.5710 U.S. compared with Wednesday's closing $1.5760. It dropped to $1.5690, then recovered briefly before falling to the new low.

Harassed foreign exchange dealers said the new drop was sparked by a 13-6 vote of the left-wing dominated national executive committee of the Labor party demanding the government restore planned spending cuts and apply "socialist policies and not cut back on the social wage."

Prime Minister James Callaghan stormed out of the meeting when it rejected the government's economic policies to date. The committee's decisions are not binding on government ministers.

"We are going to lose anyway, so it doesn't matter about my leaving," witnesses quoted Callahan as saying.

The committee also pledged support for a Nov. 17 meeting planned by 10 trade unions to protest to members of Parliament a government decision to slash public spending by $1.6 billion next year in the fight against inflation.

"The market remained extremely nervous this morning, reflecting worries about the government's ability to stave off threats to declared policies by left-wingers," a dealer for Barclays Bank International said.

Some dealers said they believed the Bank of England had intervened in the market to support sterling.

The dollar also weakened on most European markets today and fears arose in Paris that the pound's record low could drag down the French franc.

Sterling's effective devaluation against the currencies of Britain's 10 major trading partners since December, 1971, widened to 48.6 per cent.

SECOND SLIDE CUTS POWER

PRINCE RUPERT — A large mudslide, the second in two days in this area, left residents of nearby Port Edward without power today. The slide cut hydro lines, the road and CN Rail's main line between Prince Rupert and Terrace.

Power was restored to Prince Rupert Wednesday night after the city was blacked out by a mudslide Tuesday.

CENSUS FIGURES DON'T TALLY WITH REGION'S ESTIMATES

Stats Canada, What Are You Doing?

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Preliminary federal census figures just don't jibe with regional population statistics and regional planning committee members want to know why.

They agreed Wednesday to ask Stats Canada for an explanation.

The action came after regional planner Pete Hammer told committee members the variations in the two sets of statistics range anywhere from 0.9 per cent to 17.6 per cent with the largest discrepancies in Victoria, Oak Bay, Esquimalt, Sidney and the Gulf Islands.

The figures show the Capital Regional District's population at 224,566 but the CRD puts it 15,139 higher, at 239,705.

Victoria's population according to census figures is 60,407 while the CRD's is 68,050, a difference of 11 per cent.

Sidney's population shows a variance of 10 per cent, with the census showing 6,464 people and the CRD's estimate at 7,200.

The population of the other municipalities in the Greater Victoria area with CRD's estimates in brackets are: Oak Bay, 17,450 (19,050), Esquimalt, 14,745 (16,100) and Saanich, 72,124 (74,100).

The population figures are closer in outlying districts. For instance the census shows 6,789 people living in Central Saanich. The CRD estimates 6,900, only 1.6 per cent higher. And in the Langford, Colwood, Metchosin and View Royal area the population is 28,576 according to the preliminary census, 28,850 according to the CRD, a difference of 0.9 per cent.

In North Saanich the figures are about as closely matched as they could get. There, the census records 4,621 people. The CRD estimates 4,625.

In Sooke the census indicates a population of 5,659 or 3.8 per cent lower than the CRD estimate. While on the Gulf Islands there is a discrepancy of nearly 18 per cent with the census showing 6,288 people, the CRD, 7,635.

Hammer said the figures cast "enough doubt on the way Stats Canada conducted its census" as to inform the federal government of the variance and ask for an investigation.

"When you look at the number of housing starts and other indicators there is a considerable discrepancy between what our information is and what Stats Canada has come up with," he told the committee members.

Hammer said on the basis of water consumption and water connections — one indicator to measure population — Greater Victoria's population would be about 195,300, compared with the preliminary census figure of 193,302.

Another indicator is the number of telephone connections, Hammer said. In 1971 there were 62,932 domestic connections and in 1976, 80,432.

If the ratio between population and connections remains the same in both years — and it normally does, he asserted — the population of the Victoria metropolitan area would be about 250,000.

Hammer also noted the anomaly of an increase in the number of housing starts in Victoria, which have risen 4,700 over the five year period, yet the census shows corresponding drop in population there still seems to be a contion of 1,300.

"Perhaps its a change in life styles," he said. "But siderable difference."

Hammer said an accurate census count is important because transfer payments from senior levels of government are based on population figures. In addition, regional board representation is determined by population, with one representative per 5,000 persons or fraction thereof.

However, Hammer and Victoria Mayor Mike Young, a member of the planning committee, agreed a drop in transfer payments would not necessarily have an adverse effect on the municipal treasury.

"The less we receive," Young said. "The less we would pay out."

Man Charged In Holdup

A 21-year-old man was charged in provincial court today with Wednesday afternoon's $120 holdup of the Royal Bank at Government and Fort.

It was the second bank holdup in a week in the city. Police are still searching for the older man responsible for the Oct. 20 robbery at the Bank of Commerce at Yates and Government where nearly $2,000 was taken.

In Wednesday's robbery, the holdup man at one point pushed his way to the front of the line in the bank, but was told by the teller to go to the end.

He complied, waited his turn, and then demanded the teller hand over all her 20s. He said he had a gun. The teller put six $20 bills on the counter and the man picked them up and walked out.

Police said the man posed as a shopper, but then pulled a knife and demanded the money from the till.

8,000 Ask Alternative At Lagoon

An 8,000-name petition calling for some alternative to the proposed solution to the pollution problem at Esquimalt Lagoon has been presented to the provincial government.

Frank Heinrich, 3504 Happy Valley Road., one of the organizers of the petition, presented it today to the Pollution Control Board when he met with board chairman Ben Marr.

Copies of the petition have been sent to Environment Minister Jim Nielsen, other cabinet ministers, opposition parties and the Pollution Control Branch.

The petition is the second assault on the Capital Region Board's proposal for solving a septic tank problem which is polluting Esquimalt Lagoon.

About two weeks ago a mock funeral service was held to protest the board's plan.

The regional board has applied to the PCB for a permit to install an outfall to carry away sewage from 70 houses in the Esquimalt Lagoon subdivision.

The outfall would carry the sewage 800 feet into the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

The petition says the board's proposal will destroy the natural beauty of the lagoon, present a hazard to health and disturb the ecology of the lagoon wildlife sanctuary.

It says an alternative solution has to be found.

James Campbell, Capital Region Board chairman, has said the proposal is the least unattractive alternative available to the board for eliminating a proven health hazard.

He says the outfall would be in operation for no more than five years. By that time the subdivision would be served by a sewer collection system that is to be connected to a proposed large outfall at Albert Head.

Those complaining about the planned outfall complain that the smell from a federal sewage outfall in the Belmont Park subdivision is bad enough.

The protesters claim the outfall would also lead to polluted beaches.

Marr said the procedure for getting a permit for such an outfall provides time for objections to be made and appeals to be filed if necessary.

He said the first step is that the application is made to the branch and advertised in the newspapers.

The application is then assessed by the branch and during a 30-day period, people opposed to the plan can voice objections to the branch.

The branch will then make its decision, granting the permit, rejecting it, or providng an amended permit.

Should the permit be granted, those objecting have another 15 days in which to launch an appeal to the Pollution Control Board. As a result of such an appeal, the board could hold public hearings on the matter, he added.

Marr said he wanted to make it clear to the objectors that there is a great deal of opportunity for them to register their dissent.

Board Has Developer in a Spin

Five years ago, Ridley, a partner in Ridley Brothers Development, bought 28 acres off Jacklin Road in Langford. Earlier this year he submitted plans to build a retail building supply store and warehouse on the site.

That meant he had to apply for a zoning change — from limited agriculture to extended commercial.

The advisory planning commission liked the idea, and approved the application subject to the provision of roadway dedications.

The technical planning committee, however, didn't like the idea. It rejected the application and advised Ridley to apply for a land-use contract.

Regional planners then took over. They noted Ridley's property is smack within a special development area for a proposed town centre.

While declaring Ridley's proposal "not necessarily inappropriate" the planners felt it was premature. They recommended rejection but suggested development might be permitted on a land use contract basis provided the development was of a "non-permanent, interim nature."

When the application finally came before the local planning and zoning committee Aug. 18, director Howard Drummond, of Colwood, moved to override the recommendation of the planners and have a bylaw prepared to change the zoning.

A public hearing was then held.

Wednesday the bylaw came before the regional board but members appeared uncertain what to do. The problem was only one director, Earl Pallister, had attended the hearing, and he was out of town.

Pallisters alternative, John McIllree, said he was loath to speak on the bylaw and Drummond remained silent.

Three Victoria directors — Mike Young, Murray Glazier and Alf Hood — expressed grave doubts about the bylaw and in the end, the matter was simply deferred.

"It kind of shakes you," said Ridley who sat through the meeting, "Just what do they want? They say they don't want strip zoning (building in strips along a highway). Okay. So now I come with a larger zoning proposal and they don't want that either.

"I'm only asking for rezoning to extend commercial. It's a lesser zoning than what the planners of the day zoned for themselves nine years ago. Then the area was zoned industrial. I'm not asking that.

"I just can't figure them out."

ASK THE TIMES

Q. Could you find out for me what year the Kingston Street School was built and is it really in good condition? M.S.

A. The school was built in 1883, a seven-room wooden building that became known as the James Bay Ward School. Unfortunately it's condition could hardly be described as good. It's last enrolment was in June 1953 . . . and shortly after the school was torn down. Government offices sit on the site today.

Aquarium Urged In Old Crystal

A tropical aquarium should be included in a proposal to transform the abandoned Crystal Garden into a botanical garden, former provincial botanist Adam Szczawinski said today.

He was commenting on a proposal submitted to city council Tuesday by Ald. John Hayes.

An aquarium combined with a show place for tropical plants in the Crystal would complement the educational work of the Provincial Museum, he said.

Only a small number of British Columbians ever get a chance to visit Hawaii, the Fiji Islands and similar tropical places, he said.

While such a centre would be a tourist attraction, he said, the Crystal should be transformed into a plant and aquarium showplace for the "benefit and enjoyment of British Columbians."

"It would be an attraction for thousands of B.C. residents who visit the city and museum," he said.

Szczawainski said both the federal and provincial governments should provide financial assistance to restore and transform the Crystal.

"The University of Victoria should also take an interest in such a project."

He said it would be a serious mistake to tear down Victoria's "largest greenhouse."

He noted that Hayes in his proposal used the name botanical gardens.

"The name is somewhat misleading," he said, "as you need more land and space to establish a botanical garden. But the idea of using the Crystal to display tropical and exotic plants is excellent."

Oak Bay Rejects Harling Pt. Townhouse

A five-unit townhouse proposal for Oak Bay's waterfront was rejected by council on Wednesday.

The application was made by E. J. Bray to rezone his property at 2205 Lorne Terrace. Council also received about 20 letters opposing the application and a report from the municipal engineer that the development would require $16,000 worth of road upgrading.

Mayor Brian Smith said council's rejection of the rezoning application was in keeping with its policy against any high density development along the municipality's waterfront.

Messum and evidence . . . old and new

All This Paper for a $4 Bill!

Roy Messum of 1164 Highrock Place wonders if the city waterworks department has heard about the drive to save paper and energy.

He says the department is wasting money on expensive billing, particularly its use of jumbo-sized envelopes.

"What are we paying for — paper or water?" asks Messum, displaying a large envelope. "That's a lot of paper to tell me my bill is $4.

"In this day when we are asked to save paper and energy, it is surprising to observe what the city is doing about the problem," Messum said.

The envelope is 10½ inches long and 5½ inches wide and contains a piece of carbon paper. The statement or bill is the same size and takes only six lines of print.

A smaller version of the bill used by various companies takes seven lines of print. They are one-third the size of the city's water bill.

Messum said he made inquiries and found the envelopes cost about $8,000 for 100,000.

"One firm found they were too expensive and instead hired two girls to type out the bills for two days at the beginning of the month," he said. "I understand postmen don't like them because they are too big and harder to handle."

"From what I have been able to find out, there is no reason for using such large and expensive envelopes," he added.

He's a Bus Schedule Pro

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

There are many champs in the Guinness Book of World Records, but a glaring omission is Ray Townsend of Santa Barbara, Calif., who claims four world records for bus traveling in the United States and Canada.

The old travelling man passed through Victoria Tuesday on his way home — the last lap of a 25,000-mile bus trip around North America began May 5.

"I hope to be home soon and am looking forward to lunch with Dick Praul, a former city editor of the Victoria Times. Next year I will be off again," said the 76-year-old retired San Francisco garment manufacturer.

Since 1973 Townsend has travelled 250,000—210,000 by bus. The 40,00 miles were by ship, train and plane. Countries included Britain, 18 European countries, Mexico, Alaska, Newfoundland and Canada.

His other bus-riding records are 11,000 miles in 15 days; 21,000 in 30 days and 36,000 in 60 days. All have been documented.

Ray Townsend . . . a travellin' man

He has become such a familiar person on Greyhound buses that he has been made a honorary bus driver.

"I can't drive, of course," he said. "It is just an honor."

Townsend started bus traveling after his wife died in 1973.

"I travel to keep from being bored," he said. "I ride at night so I can see the sights in various cities during the day. I never suffer from lack of sleep or indigestion."

"Apart from sleeping, "my spare time is spent working out bus schedules and connections."

He has no time to read on buses, he said.

Some of his trips have been adventurous, he recalled. In strife-torn Belfast he was shot at and later searched by soldiers at half a dozen checkpoints.

His favorite city is Vienna.

Where was he going next year?

"Oh! I guess I will do another bus tour of England, Scotland, Wales and Ireland," he said.

BOY COMPACTED

DELTA (CP) — A 12-year-old Surrey boy nearly got packed away with the garbage Wednesday after he ran away from home.

Delta police said the boy ran away from home Tuesday because of trouble at school. He found a bed for the night in a large garbage bin at the shopping mall.

The next morning, unaware the boy was inside, the diver of a Haul-Away Disposal Ltd. truck hooked on to the bin and dumped it aboard his truck.

The boy and garbage were then run through a complete cycle of the compacting machinery. It wasn't until the driver started to drive away that he heard screaming from the back of the truck.

The boy was pulled out unhurt and turned over to his mother at home. The only loss was one shoe in the compactor.

Black Demands Delay Geneva Talks Start

Times News Services

GENEVA — Black nationalists forced a two hour delay in the opening of the Rhodesia conference today with demands for concessions from white Prime Minister Ian Smith.

The demands which caused the postponement came from nationalist leaders Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo, conference officials revealed.

They said the two men insisted on receiving a reply from Smith to earlier demands for the release of all polifical detainees in Rhodesia.

Smith had sent a reply to Richard Wednesday night but it apparently had not been relayed to the Africans, the officials said.

Smith, in his response indicated he would consider the release of some prisoners but that all acts of terrorism would first have to cease.

Earlier Richard told newsmen the major problem facing the parley was the "enormous depth of suspicion between the two sides. One sees it, one can almost feel it in the air around this building and this town."

Richard also said that the talks on establishing black majority rule could go on for five or six weeks.

"You are asking me questions that are five or six weeks down the road if this conference is going to be successful," he told reporters.

Meanwhile, in Salisbury, security officials announced that 11 persons have died in clashes, abduction and sexual violence in the last three days of escalating warfare.

Security forces headquarters Wednesday said its forces killed two black guerrillas in clashes and a black man who apparently violated a government curfew.

It said guerrillas killed seven persons — all apparently blacks — including a government official and a policeman shot to death after being forced at gunpoint to have sexual relations with two young women.

The eleventh casualty, they said, was a black man who hanged himself in jail "after confessing to have aided terrorists."

Black nationalists have vowed to further intensify the violence, particularly if the Geneva conference falters.

HANGING HOUSE BUILT IN BRIDGE

HOUSTON (CP)—Officials are baffled as to how a makeshift house, complete with a toilet and lighting system, came to be built 45 feet above the swirling Bulkley River amid the supporting framework of a highway bridge just outside this northwest B.C. community.

John Turford of Burns Lake, a highways department foreman, said in an interview that the wood frame structure was well constructed with insulated walls.

"I wouldn't call it a house, but it was a very liveable thing."

He said the RCMP told him Wednesday the structure was the work of several juveniles, but police remain stumped as to how it was built and how those responsible for it gained access. "If this was kids, then, as far as I'm concerned, they got an awful lot of courage," Mr. Turford said.

He said when highways crews first spotted the structure about a week ago, they tried to gain access to it by going over the bridge railing and swinging into it with the help of safety lines, but "it was too damn risky."

Access was finally gained by using a 50-foot fire-truck ladder.

Cruise Ship For City?

The Nanaimo company that bought the cruise ship Prince George from the provincial government earlier this year is now investigating whether or not she can be used as a hotel-motel-restaurant in Victoria's Inner Harbor.

A spokesman for Wong Bros. Enterprises confirmed today his company is interested in bringing the 350-foot ship to Victoria but declined to elaborate.

The company's original intention was to use the Prince George as a restaurant and convention centre in the Nanaimo Harbor but a suitable site is apparently not available.

Victoria deputy fire chief Carl Coates said he has been approached by a Yarrows shipyard official who wanted to know what conversion requirements would be needed to make the Prince George meet fire marshal requirements for a hotel-motel-restaurant facility.

Victoria Mayor Mike Young said the Reid Centre frontage is now under the authority of the provincial government and administered through the Capital Improvement District Commission. Any decision on granting docking facilities would have to be made by the provincial government, in cooperation with the city.

He doubted, however, if sufficient wharfage would be available.

SECOND SLIDE CUTS POWER

PRINCE RUPERT — A large mudslide, the second in two days in this area, left residents of nearby Port Edward without power today. The slide cut hydro lines, the road and CN Rail's main line between Prince Rupert and Terrace.

Power was restored to Prince Rupert Wednesday night after the city was blacked out by a mudslide Tuesday.

Guards Favor Strike

MONTREAL (CP) — The 7,000 employees of the Canadian Penitentiary Service have given their union, the Public Service Alliance of Canada, a strike mandate to back 12 demands made earlier this month.

The employees, who include guards, clerks and secretaries, voted 77 per cent in favor of the strike mandate to back the demands made Oct. 3 at a meeting between the 47 regional union presidents and penitentiary commissioner Andre Therrien.

The vote was taken in secret last week and Mr. Therrien has notified the union he will make a decision this week on the demands which include:

—That all prisoners considered to be troublemakers be placed in special institutions away from the rest of the prison population.

—That a full delegation of authority be given to institutional directors and that they be responsible to the commissioner.

—That guards not be forced to work overtime.

—That prisoners wear identification numbers on the front and back of their uniforms to make it easy for guards to identify those involved in disturbances.

—That no prisoner be permitted to make any statements to the media unless approved by prison officials.

THREINEN

DORCHESTER, N.B. (CP) —Two hostages held at the federal penitentiary for about 27 hours were released unharmed today and the three prisoners who had seized them surrendered, a prison official said.

Tom Epp, assistant director at the maximum-security penitentiary, said the incident ended about 20 minutes after "things looked tense. Then all of a sudden, it just clicked."

One of the hostages was prisoner John Threinen, convicted in October, 1975, of killing four children in Saskatoon.

The other was prison guard John Gabriel, 25, who was taking the prisoners to a recreation area Wednesday afternoon when he was abducted by three prisoners wielding a kitchen utensil, thought to be a knife.

Epp said there had been the "standard threats" against them, such as removal of fingers, if authorites do not co-operate.

Officials refused a demand for keys to five other cells in the segregation block, but agreed to demands for better recreation facilities, an investigation into medical facilities, an inquiry into the concept of segregating prisoners from other criminals, and the transfer of participants in the hostage-taking to other institutions.

Officials also rejected a demand that the participants not be segregated when they are transferred, Epp said.

John Steeves, a CBC reporter from Moncton who was requested by the prisoners to join the negotiations, said today the prisoners did not trust officials and wanted iron-clad guarantees their demands would be met.

The prisoners also asked for the tranquillizer Seconal but prison officials gave them Valium.

The 101-year-old prison near the New Brunswick-Nova Scotia border has a section where sex offenders such as Threinen and other unpopular prisoners are kept for their own protection.

Police Almost Walked Off

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Late pay cheques and a one-day pay deduction for 21 Victoria policemen who booked off sick last Thursday in a stalled-contract protest sparked threats of another walkout this morning.

But later police union president Sgt. Patrick Braiden said at least the first problem had been resolved.

"The cheques arrived by 10 a.m., otherwise we wouldn't still be here," he said.

Braiden said the problem arose because Mayor Mike Young, chairman of the Victoria police board, appeared to have "reconsidered his position" since an agreement reached last Friday.

The result was the decision —he didn't know whether it was Young's or the police board's — to dock a day's pay for the officers concerned, and this in turn caused delays in the preparation of the cheques.

But the mayor himself expressed surprise at the union's attitude, saying Braiden was informed by letter early in the week that the deductions would be made.

Young said he stated in the letter that the officers who were "quote, sick, unquote" would not be paid for that day. This was not a matter of disciplinary action or retaliation, however.

He also pointed out to the union that if it disagrees, the appropriate action would be to file a grievance.

STOVE BLASTS BOAT

VANCOUVER (CP) — A stove burning in the cabin apparently touched off an explosion and fire Wednesday which destroyed a 35-foot fishboat in Coal Harbor.

Owner of the boat, an unidentified Powell River man, was not injured.

Ron Robison, attendant at the gas barge where the accident began, said he had just pumped 80 gallons of gasoline into the boat and was starting to pump in stove oil when the explosion occurred.

He said the owner scrambled off the bow of the boat when the cabin exploded and the two men threw off the mooring lines and the boat drifted away from the barge.

"Then he informed me his stove was going through all this (refuelling)," said Robison.

He added that the owner mentioned it was his second boat which had exploded.

The boat ran aground at Stanley Park where land-based fire crews waded into the water and doused the flames. The city fire boat was unable to operate because the water was too shallow.

Hydro Sees Less Demand

VANCOUVER (AP) — Hugh Goldie, a planner for B.C. Hydro, says growth of electricity demands in the province during the next 10 years won't be as high as previously predicted.

Goldie, Hydro's system engineering division manager, said Wednesday in an interview that because of this decline and because necessary studies cannot be completed in time, the Peace River Site dam project and the McGregor River diversion probably can be delayed.

He also said that whether Hydro's plans include thermal or hydro-produced power, inflation has increased the cost by 20 to 25 per cent above May, 1975, estimates.

Goldie said he wanted to make it clear that he was discussing power developments that may follow Hydro's currently proposed Revelstoke Dam on the Columbia River.

He made the statements while discussing the extensive review Hydro has prepared for consideration by its directors. Details of the review have not been made public and no decision on the report has been made.

PREVUE PUZZLE PAYOFF DOUBLES

To the more than 2,400 Victoria daily newspaper readers who entered the Prevue Payoff Puzzle contest last week:

That's right. There was no correct solution to the puzzle received by the judges and this week's Payoff Puzzle prize goes up to $100.

The Prevue section in Friday's Times will give puzzle fans the correct solution to last week's puzzle, along with the reasons for choosing one word over another in filling in the crossword blanks — and another chance at the prize money with a new puzzle and official entry blank.

A word of caution to all entrants: please read the rules carefully so that your entry will qualify. Most important, if you do not follow the instructions to write the answer to one of the clues, as designated in the entry form, on the outside of your envelope, your entry will not be considered. And no entries received after the specified deadline will be considered.

If you study the answers to last week's puzzle carefully, you'll find that winning this prize is not a matter of luck. Finding the correct solution to the clues where more than one answer seems to apply requires careful definition of the word and its most logical use.

That's why the Prevue Payoff Puzzle would be fun for crossword fans even if there wasn't a cash prize to be won.

Times News Services

Britain's pound fell to a new low today while leaders of the ruling Labor party squabbled publicly over economic policy.

Sterling had opened at $1.5710 U.S. compared with Wednesday's closing $1.5760. It dropped to $1.5690, then recovered briefly before falling to the new low.

Harassed foreign exchange dealers said the new drop was sparked by a 13-6 vote of the left-wing dominated national executive committee of the Labor party demanding the government restore planned spending cuts and apply "socialist policies and not cut back on the social wage."

Prime Minister James Callaghan stormed out of the meeting when it rejected the government's economic policies to date. The committee's decisions are not binding on government ministers.

"We are going to lose anyway, so it doesn't matter about my leaving," witnesses quoted Callahan as saying.

The committee also pledged support for a Nov. 17 meeting planned by 10 trade unions to protest to members of Parliament a government decision to slash public spending by $1.6 billion next year in the fight against inflation.

"The market remained extremely nervous this morning, reflecting worries about the government's ability to stave off threats to declared policies by left-wingers," a dealer for Barclays Bank International said.

Some dealers said they believed the Bank of England had intervened in the market to support sterling.

The dollar also weakened on most European markets today and fears arose in Paris that the pound's record low could drag down the French franc.

Sterling's effective devaluation against the currencies of Britain's 10 major trading partners since December, 1971, widened to 48.6 per cent.

Shot Friend in Battle of Rifles—Rodriguez

NANAIMO (CP) — James Rodriguez Melendez testified in B.C. Supreme Court Wednesday that he shot his former friend in a battle of rifles and then shot the axe-swinging woman who caused the rift in their friendship.

Rodriguez, 25, is charged with murder in the shooting deaths of James Oldfield and Pamela Jones in a house near Duncan, Oct. 24, 1975.

He said the shootings occurred when he went to the house to retrieve personal effects including $2,000 worth of camera equipment and $3,500 in cash. He said he was moving out because he feared Oldfield and that he went to the house when he believed no one was there.

Rodriguez testified he feared Oldfield because tales of gangland-style killings told him both by friends who subsequently became Crown witnesses and by Oldfield.

Because he was afraid, he took a .22-calibre rifle when he went to the house on Oct. 24, 1975.

As he piled belongings in the kitchen, "I heard the front door opening, I called out, I heard feet running and a door close."

"I thought I was in some kind of danger . . . of the threats he (Oldfield) had made and he was going to do me some harm," Rodriguez testified.

Rifle in hand, he went down a hallway, opend a door and saw Oldfield.

"I saw Oldfield with the rifle working the mechanism to load it," Rodriguez said.

He said Oldfield raised the rifle, put his hand to the trigger area and "I used my gun and I shot; I felt fear for my life."

"He said he could not say Oldfield shot, but that he heard a bang from that direction.

"He fell down . . . the young lady (Jones) started screaming. I backed out of the bedroom and I saw (her) coming at me. She had picked up one of the wood axes and came forward screaming. I remember she swung twice.

"I backed up into the kitchen, screaming (at her) 'No, no don't do this,'" Rodriguez said.

"I backed up until I collided with the stove and the furnishings in the kitchen."

Asked why he didn't run, he said he was certain she would hit him with the axe as he turned his back. The gun went off at least once he said, but she continued swinging at him.

"Then I pointed my gun at her and I shot."

Rodriguez said the woman fell and the house became silent.

"I was sort of crying," he said, adding that he went to Oldfield "to see if he was alive, and he wasn't."

He said he then drank a full bottle of wine he found in the house, then called his friend Gerald Frank, a Crown witness.

Frank and Wolfgang Brust, another Crown witness, arrived in about an hour, he said. He told court the two talked him out of calling the police, because no one would believe his story.

In shock, he obeyed their suggestions; Rodriguez said. The three men then wrapped the bodies and tied them with string, carried them to a rented car Rodriguez had been using and took them to a nearby dump.

When Frank suggested that lye be used to destroy the bodies, Rodriguez said he became horrified and started screaming at them. He said the bodies were thrown near the dump and that Brust covered them with blood-stained carpeting taken from the house.

The trial continues.

Two Years Extra for Walk-Away

A 38-year-old Victoria area man paid for almost one year of unauthorized liberty when he was sentenced Wednesday in Victoria provincial court by Judge William Ostler to two years in prison.

Leonard Robert Larson pleaded guilty to a Saanich charge of being unlawfully at large Oct. 22, 1975, from Lifeline House, 5023 Old West Saanich Road, and also to a four-count Victoria charge containing three counts about credit cards and one of uttering a cheque.

Statements by prosecutor Robert Mulligan and defence lawyer William McElmoyle showed Larson had a record dating back to 1957 and including one 1973 conviction in Victoria for being unlawfully at large and four convictions for robbery — in Vancouver in 1959, 1960 and 1967 and in Coquitlam in 1974, when he was imprisoned for seven years.

Larson was transferred to William Head in 1975 and was placed on day parole Sept. 10 of that year. He went to the Lifeline House for inmates and helped at the Glendale centre for troubled children.

McElmoyle said Larson had been allowed to take some Glendale children to Quebec for several weeks, apparently without escort, and returned them without trouble. But on his return, said the defence lawyer, Larson became involved "with a civilian staff worker" at William Head and "she became pregnant."

Because of the pressure of this and a long-standing alcohol problem, said McElmoyle, Larson left Lifeline Oct. 22, 1975. He said Larson spent six months working as a nursing aide with Vietnam veterans in California and was a Vancouver apartment block manager for more than two months.

Larson returned to Victoria in early October and was arrested Oct. 14 by Victoria police in an apartment on Kingston. The officers who found him "hiding in the kitchen" discovered Larson had credit cards belonging to a former employer.

The cards had been used Oct. 13 to obtain $171.25 in cash and merchandise from two Victoria stores and Larson uttered a $100 cheque Oct. 12 at a third store to obtain a $100 ring later sold at a beer parlor by another man.

Ostler said that "there is much good in this man (but) there is altogether too much" in the way of escapes and at-large incidents in this area. He sentenced Larson to one year for being unlawfully at large and a second year for the other offences, saying they would be added to the uncompleted part of his 1974 terms.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Only a seven-year gap since his last dentention for a narcotics offence saved a 29-year-old Victoria man from going to jail again, Judge William Ostler said Wednesday in Victoria provincial court.

Instead, he ordered a $750 fine for Philip Ralph Isaacson, 108 Pandora, who pleaded guilty to a lesser charge of possession of LSD in Victoria Nov. 17, 1975, and then was found not guilty by Ostler on the original charge of possession of LSD for the purpose of trafficking.

Prosecutor William Southward, who consented to the plea, said 18 capsules were found when a car in which Isaacson was a passenger was stopped by police in the 2800-block Douglas about 7:45 p.m. Nov. 17, 1975.

He said Isaacson's record included seven offences from early 1965 to late 1969 and the last sentence was two years for trafficking in a narcotic in Victoria in August, 1969.

Bail was refused by Ostler for Norman Claude Vandal, 24, of 680 Garbally, who was remanded to today for further hearing on two Victoria charges, both dated last Friday.

The first contains one count of attempting to defraud a Victoria store of a coat and one count of possession of a credit card "known to have been obtained in Canada by the commission of an offence." The second count, enacted into law last spring, carries a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison.

The second charge contains two counts of defrauding Victoria stores of clothing. At the request of defence lawyer Harvey Korman, Ostler issued an order prohibiting publication or broadcast of bail-hearing details.

Separate charges of escaping Oct. 8 from Oakalla jail in Burnaby were on the court calendar for Dennis Matthew Wilson, 23, and Thomas Russell Totten, 26, but were not read formally and were remanded by Ostler for further hearing later, along with a joint Saanich charge.

Wilson and Totten, reported by police to be among six who left the jail, were charged Oct. 13 in Victoria court with possession of housebreaking instruments Oct. 12 in Saanich and possession of a known stolen car at the same time.

John Barrett, 18, of 92 Wellington, and Carl Richard Bamforth, 19, of 1645 Richardson, chose trial by county court judge on a joint Victoria charge of a break-in and theft Saturday at London Fish and Chips, 723 Pandora.

They also pleaded not guilty to a second joint Victoria charge of possession Saturday of known stolen cases of beer. Ostler, who had ordered Monday that both be detained in custody, chose Nov. 22 for a preliminary hearing of the break-in charge and trial of the other.

Duncan area resident Roxie Gail Haslam, 19, pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of stealing $4.74 worth of cosmetics Oct. 13 from the F. W. Woolworth store, 1200 Douglas.

Prosecutor Robert Mulligan said Ms. Haslam had two previous convictions, both earlier this year and one for a similar theft. Ostler warned that she could not expect to avoid jail if she continued such conduct and fined her $250.

Peter George MacLean, 25, of 22 Midwood, chose trial by county court judge on a Victoria charge of possession Oct. 16 of two known stolen coats and had his preliminary hearing set by Ostler for next Tuesday. MacLean was charged Oct. 18, when Ostler ended a bail hearing by ordering detention in custody.

In traffic court, Gordon William Johnson, 53, of 1345 Pembroke, pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of driving Oct. 17 with a blood-alcohol reading above .08 per cent and was sentenced by Judge Blake Allan to an intermittent jail term of 28 days.

They were Wade William Holstein, 30, of Humpback Road, stopped Oct. 16 and fined $500; Raymond David Smith, 59, Port Renfrew, Oct. 15 and $450; George Wilfred Taylor, 56, of 2500 Florence Lake, Oct. 17 and $500; Peter Albert Wiens, 39, of 3172 Pearkes, Aug. 8 and 5$00, and Gerald Alexander Sylvester, 17, of 2609 Sooke, Oct. 10, fined $50 and ordered to do 100 hours of community work.

John Norman Leebetter, 51, of 1746 Pembroke, pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of driving "over .08" and was fined $500.

Juveniles Charged With 18 Offences

Two Victoria boys have been charged in juvenile court with 18 offences in Oak Bay in September and October and will be charged with others shortly, Oak Bay police disclosed Wednesday.

A spokesman said the boys, both aged 14, were apprehended after a three-day investigation of a dozen thefts of bicycles and thefts from cars plus two break-ins at construction sheds and four break-ins with theft from boats at the Oak Bay Marina.

Police said the total value of items taken in the thefts was about $1,500 and half of the items had been recovered.

Rezoning Opposed

DUNCAN — An angry citizen lashed Duncan council this week for what he considered an excessive amount of spot rezoning for townhouse developments.

Don Voysey, of 391 Prevost Road, was one of a number of residents who voiced their opposition to further rezoning.

Voysey said they didn't know from one week to the next if another "barracks-like" building would be proposed beside their homes.

In response to an alderman's question he said he would prefer to see the whole area rezoned so that a developer could purchase all the properties and produce an over-all plan.
